WAR SUMMARY OF THE LATEST EVENTS

Inclement weather still prevents the resumption of operations on the western front. The French report says that there was no action during the day on any part of the front. The Germans, it is stated, tried to launch an attack on Tuesday night in the Forest of Le Pretre, on the Lorraine line, but was immediately checked. Berlin says it was the French who attacked, and who were held back by the German artillery. The fog and rain seem to have confused the observers. Berlin reports that fighting on the eastern bank of the Yser Canal north of Ypres developed in favor of the Germans, and that a British attack near Neuve Chapelle and a French advance in Neuville were at once checked.

These minor operations are dwarfed by the great drama of the San. The Russian reports are still optimistic, but it is recognized and admitted that the retirement from the Beskids and the Dunajec has robbed Russia of the fruits of months of hard fighting, and caused a material prolongation of the war. The problem of immediate importance for the Russians is the defence of Przemyśl. The Germans have undoubtedly obtained a footing on the right bank of the San between Przemyśl and Jaroslau. A very short day's march to the south will enable them to cut the railway that connects Przemyśl with Lemberg. If that is done the fortress will be isolated, for most of the region to the south has already been overrun by the German army that advanced northward across the mountains. Two counter-strokes have been made by the Grand Duke Nicholas in the hope of lessening the pressure in western Galicia. From the vicinity of Opatow in Southern Poland, a strong Russian force has been thrown against the German left flank resting on the Vistula, while in eastern Galicia and Bukowina the Austrians are being driven from position to position, and are losing heavily in every action. So far the Russian thrusts have had no effect upon the steady drive of the German centre towards Przemyśl and Lemberg. Between Von Mackensen's spearhead and the Galician capital no adequate shield has been interposed. The German losses have been immense, but the recapture of Lemberg would be a big gain, and might make neutrals thinking of joining in the fray think a little longer.

The present Austro-German advance in Galicia is believed in Petrograd to be the final effort to break Russia's military power. Between 1,200,000 and 1,300,000 men are engaged in the advance, of whom at least 400,000 are Germans. The operations are entirely under the control of the German General Staff, and if they fail to achieve a decided success the talk in the Austrian army is that the Dual Monarchy will be unable to carry on the war. The Austrian officers and soldiers captured in eastern Galicia, and now being

WALLPAPER !

We have found it necessary to order more of our popular Wall Paper.

The sales have been in excess of our wildest imaginations. The reasons are obvious.

Mr. Paul has travelled for the Watson Foster Co., for the past five years, and handling, as he has, so much he is able to get it at the very lowest price counting discount quantities.

As he has all the samples before the season commences he can at leisure make his selections, and they are certainly sellers.

An Examination of the line will be appreciated.

have been immense, but the recapture of Lemberg would be a big gain, and might make neutrals thinking of joining in the fray think a little longer.

The present Austro-German advance in Galicia is believed in Petrograd to be the final effort to break Russia's military power. Between 1,200,000 and 1,300,000 men are engaged in the advance, of whom at least 400,000 are Germans. The operations are entirely under the control of the German General Staff, and if they fail to achieve a decided success the talk in the Austrian army is that the Dual Monarchy will be unable to carry on the war. The Austrian officers and soldiers captured in eastern Galicia and now passing through Lemberg are almost all of classes of the Landsturm, hitherto exempt from service. If the Austrians who under German direction are once more trying to eject the Russians from Galicia, are again driven back there will be no more fight left in them.

The British War Office announces that recruits will now be accepted up to the age of forty. Hitherto the age has been thirty-five, and a sufficient number has been obtained within that age to fill up Kitchener's army. The call for 300,000 more men will be answered by many between thirty-five and forty who have been desirous of enlisting, but hitherto have not been permitted to do so. An even more serious step than raising the age of recruits may be taken to secure enough men to see the nation's big job through. Mr. Tennant, Under-Secretary for War, in the Commons last night, said there was a possibility that conscription might have to be resorted to. That would at once give Britain at least two million additional men, assuming that service would be compulsory for those under forty.

An official report from the Dardanelles indicates that the British heavy artillery is getting into position. A howitzer battery on Tuesday smashed a Turkish ammunition train and demolished some entrenchments, besides making a direct hit on one of the Turkish big guns. The report states that every day sees an improvement in the Anglo-French position. The Lancashire Territorials made considerable progress on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The fleet, according to unofficial despatches, has been hammering away at the Kild Bahr and Nagara forts for several days. It is asserted that Kild Bahr has been silenced, and that the fall of Nagara is imminent. The allied troops will not be able to take immediate advantage of the silencing of the guns of Kild Bahr. They are still but a little north of Krithia, and several miles of territory covered with trenches and barbed wire lie between them and the big Turkish fort.

The bombardment of Smyrna on Sunday and Monday was the most serious the forts there have been subjected to. The seven British warships which took part in it fired more than 600 shells, and the Turkish defences were seriously damaged. The Turks are making repairs, and are constructing more gun positions and trenches at points where it is thought a landing may be attempted. The port has been closed, and mines are being laid in the channel of approach. The persistent attacks upon Smyrna cannot be intended altogether as a diversion to prevent the garrison from being used to reinforce the Turkish army in the Dardanelles. It is possible that the allies have need of a better base than Tenedos or Enos, and desire possession of Smyrna for that purpose. The discharge of the enormous quantities of provisions and war material required for the army and fleet operating in the Dardanelles would be greatly facilitated by the use of the harbor of Smyrna.

ENGLISH ADVANCE MADE

British Troops Add to Great Victory of Sunday.

Five Miles of Trenches Near La Bassee Still Remaining to Enemy After Victory at Festubert Are Captured by Gen. French's First Army—Movement Still Under Way—Many Prisoners Taken.

LONDON, May 18.—The British army continued its offensive north of La Bassee yesterday, and after turning the trenches on the two fronts which remained in position of the Germans following the battle on Sunday, made a new advance to a considerable distance, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. A contingent of several hundred men, caught between the fire of British machine guns and that of their own artillery, was almost completely exterminated under the shelling. Over 1,000 prisoners were taken, according to the French official communiqué.

In his report of Sir John French the first army has gained further successes south of Richebourg and all the German trenches in front of two miles were captured.

This morning several bodies of men surrendered voluntarily to troops, who continue to fight with great gallantry and determination. One of these bodies while attempting to surrender was caught by machine artillery fire and practically annihilated.

The exact number of prisoners taken has not been ascertained, but 550 have been cleared to the lines of communication.

On the remainder of the front there have been no incidents to report.

The British movement is still underway, and gives indication of being as important in the matter of territory won as was the recent advance.

In last Sunday's battle, which was much larger, when the nature of the terrain and the conditions of the fighting are taken into account, than any engagement on the British front since the defeat of Ypres last autumn, the British front broke the German line near Richebourg l'Avoue and moved on, then in Flanders, on the great flank of a two-mile front, and at the British storming columns advanced rapidly on and penetrated German lines nearly a mile. This is held for the Germans by Austrian troops under their command.

The battle was begun Saturday night. It was prepared for by secret massing of a great quantity of artillery and ammunition, heralded by a terrific bombardment of the German lines with high-explosive shells. It took only a few minutes for the British guns to pound away all the German trenches, tumble the earth about the ears of the surviving German occupants.

The first point bombarded was that of Richebourg l'Avoue, near La Bassee. Two lines of German barbed wire were carried by the aid of the terrible guns in a few minutes.

These lines extended on a front of 800 yards, and were in two parts, both being carried after they had been practically obliterated. They were then directed on 1,200 yards of German front line trenches, and a mile further south, and at the bombardment began. In

THREE ZEPPELINS GONE.

Allies Play l'Avoc With Great German Dirigibles.

LONDON, May 18.—Two Zeppelin airships, members of the fleet which raid towns on both sides of the English Channel during the early hours of Monday, were destroyed, according to reports reaching here from Northern France, while a third dirigible is described in an Admiralty statement as having been severely damaged by bombs thrown from a British aeroplane. One of the destroyed Zeppelins was brought down by gunfire and landed near Dunkirk, where its crew was captured. The other was sunk in the Channel by the fire of a French torpedo boat, and bodies of members of its crew were seen floating off Gravelines.

A correspondent at Rotterdam sends an account of an engagement between a Zeppelin and a squadron of allied aeroplanes in Belgium in which the Zeppelin and two of the allied aeroplanes were destroyed.

Two Zeppelins are said to have crossed over Brussels traveling westward on May 10. One of them returned alone at 8 o'clock that evening and was surrounded and attacked by the aeroplane squadron. Many persons counted 27 machines in the allied fleet. The Zeppelin made a spirited fight with its machine guns and tried to escape by soaring, but the aeroplanes manoeuvred skilfully and quickly and gave the dirigible no chance to get away. The Zeppelin was disabled in less than 15 minutes and fell. All the crew of 60 are said to have been killed. Two of the aeroplanes were destroyed and their pilots killed by the Zeppelin's fire.

CRUCIFIXIONS PROVEN.

Letters From Officers Corroborate Stories of Hun Fendishness.

LONDON, May 18.—Several letters from Canadian officers and men have been received by R. P. Houston, M.P., corroborating the charges that the Germans crucified Canadians. As a result of these, Mr. Houston intends putting further questions in the House of Commons. He will ask the Under Secretary for War if he has information that during a recent fight, in which the Canadians were temporarily driven back, and were compelled to leave forty wounded in a barn, that on recapturing the position they found that the Germans had bayoneted all the wounded except a sergeant, and that the Germans had removed the figure of Christ from the village crucifix and fastened the sergeant there while alive, and also if crucifixion is becoming a favorite practice of the enemy. Mr. Houston produced a letter from a lieutenant of the 15th battalion, confirming these charges, and also another letter which asserted that a Canadian Highlander was crucified on a barn door, with bayonets through his hands, feet and throat. The writer avers that a chaplain took the statement on oath of the man who took down the body of the sergeant. Mr. Houston is an active member of the Administrative Committee of the 2nd King Edward's Horse, in which capacity he has come in contact with many Canadians.

ITALY EAGER FOR WAR

Austro-German Conspiracy to Avert It Fails.

Retention of Salandra Is Taken as a Sign That the Government Is Ready to Move—Cabinet Council Is to Be Held on Thursday—Premier Giolitti's Plan to Upset Ministry Is Thwarted.

ROME, May 18.—News that the Salandra Ministry is to be retained has swept over Italy and united all factions in a great cry for war. Reservists of the age of 55 have been called out. The fact that King Victor Emmanuel has accepted Premier Salandra is taken as proof that he has come at last to favor intervention and has given his consent to mobilization. Important events are expected momentarily. The King's lifeguards already have been supplied with campaign uniforms.

The German-Austrian Ambassadors' amazing conspiracy with Signor Giolitti and his Parliamentary supporters has been thwarted only by the patriotism of the people and the King.

Just when it was on the point of succeeding, Baron Macchio, the Austrian Ambassador, repaired to the Foreign Office Saturday evening and inquired of Baron Sonnino whether there was any truth in newspaper reports of accord between Italy and the Entente powers, adding that to obviate dangerous misunderstanding an immediate official contradiction was imperative.

Sonnino replied that having resigned office he felt incompetent to deal with the subject, but as he once more is a Minister it is probable the same question will be put to him to-day and the inevitable answer will be returned.

The consequence will be a demand by Von Macchio and Von Buelow for their passports and a formal declaration of war, which is expected shortly. The Italian crisis is now over and the Italian campaign against the Teutonic allies is about to begin.

A Cabinet Council has been convoked for Thursday by Premier Salandra.

A clash between Italians and Austrians was reported Sunday from Sogno. A company of Austrian soldiers crossed the frontier and were engaged by Italian troops who were rushed to the scene. After an exchange of rifle-fire the Italians charged and drove the Austrians back. One prisoner was captured.

Military preparations continue without cessation. Trains laden with troops and war materials are constantly departing for the Tyrol frontier. The number of soldiers already mobilized is estimated at 1,700,000.

The Austrian Consulate here having notified the few remaining Austrians to be ready to depart at a moment's notice, the majority of them decided to leave yesterday.

While the official announcement of the retention of Premier Salandra at the head of the Cabinet has put an end to the war riots throughout Italy, there were many demonstrations of rejoicing yesterday. These were particularly impressive at Milan, Florence, Naples, Messina, Bologna, Palermo and Catania.

The outbursts at Genoa Saturday night attained serious proportions. There was hand-to-hand fighting between partisans of war and the pacifists. Twenty policemen were wounded before order was restored.

BEYOND CONCEPTION.
Belgium's Fate Overtops All Previous National Tragedies.

No modern famine was ever like this famine because it is universal writes Arnold Bennett, playwright and author, of the condition in Belgium. The entire population has to be fed, and those whom charity does not reach will die.

There are whole districts utterly without grain, flour, beans, peas and even salt. For three weeks in Terhaegen there was absolutely nothing edible except potatoes. In Brussels alone 400,000 meals per day are being served; the theoretical price of each meal is one sou, and few can pay it; the poor and those who were rich stand side by side waiting the dish that will keep them alive. Women beg at the street corners for a centime (the tenth of a penny). In Antwerp a thousand women, ill-clad wait shivering in the snow for the hour of the free meal.

The condition of the Belgian refugees in certain parts of Holland is appalling. At Rotterdam you can see over 400 human beings crowded the surviving German occupants. The first point bombarded was that of Richebourg l'Avoue, near Laesee. Two lines of German astworks were carried by the aid the terrible guns in a few minutes. These lines extended on a distance of 800 yards, and were in two parts, both being carried after they were practically obliterated. The lines were then directed on 1,200 yards of German front line trenches, and a mile further south, and at 7 o'clock the bombardment began. In a few minutes the British infantry rushed these positions and were rapidly on. By bombing the German trenches, the British infantry extended their success to 600 yards further south, and they crossed Festubert-Quinquevillers road and advanced nearly a mile to the German lines. The fighting is still being continued, and is going in favor of the British.

Throughout the day our troops went splendidly," reports Sir John French. "This magnificent success was won by the British first army, under the command of Sir Douglas Haig."

White Flag Violated.

LONDON, May 18.—According to reports from the British on the Gallipoli Peninsula have for the last three days been subjected to a series of violent attacks by the Turks. All have been repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy and many prisoners and a number of machine guns have been taken. The allies complain of abuse of the white flag by the enemy, who repeatedly asked a truce to bury their dead and in this was granted, while the allies were also burying their dead at the same time removing the dead of both nations to the hospital base, the Turco-Germans cheerfully opened fire, killing a number of our men. The allies are gaining ground slowly. The advance is much hampered by the entanglements protecting the enemy's trenches. The British are using hand grenades with telling effect.

Steamer Missanabie at Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 18.—The Missanabie of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Lines docked at Montreal on yesterday. She sailed from Liverpool on Friday, May 7, and crossed the Atlantic a total of 22 passengers, 269 cabin and third-class. Captain G. C. Evans reported an eventful trip.

Boy Accidentally Killed.

ARIS, Ont., May 18.—A sad young fatality occurred here at 7.45 Saturday evening by which William, the sixteen-year-old of Charles Knight, lost his life. He left his home shortly after 7 o'clock, and was shooting near the spring ground, and by some means his rifle went off, the bullet going through the lad's heart.

Cave of the Nativity.

In Bethlehem of Judea is a cave known to have been the birthplace of Christ. Over it is the beautiful Church of the Nativity. The cave is about twenty feet below the level of the church and is reached by means of two spiral staircases. It is lined with Italian marble and lighted with many lamps. A silver star marks the precise spot at which Christ is said to have been born. Sixteen lamps of precious metal shed their soft glow upon the scene, while golden censurs send up incense continually.

BATTLE PROGRESSES.

Allied Forces Pounding Away at Forts on the Dardanelles.

LONDON, May 18.—The fighting in the Dardanelles continues vigorously, and the losses on both sides are probably very heavy. The allied forces are concentrating their efforts on the capture of two heights that overlook the approaches to the Narrows. The Turks are offering a desperate resistance, but the steady advance of the allies and the terrible fire from the ships are said to be weakening it.

According to authentic news from Constantinople, numerous arrests are being effected among influential Old Turks for complicity in a recently discovered Armenian plot. The Turkish press declares that this plot was hatched abroad by General Enver Pasha, Ismail Bey and other enemies of the Young Turk party. According to this source, it was intended to assassinate Enver Pasha and Talaat Bey as soon as the allies succeeded in forcing the Dardanelles and to conclude an immediate peace with the Entente powers.

A Sofia despatch received in London said it was reported there that the allies had occupied the town of Aidos, north of fort Kilid Bazar on the Gallipoli peninsula, and Boulaïr, north of the town of Gallipoli. The report was not credited.

Armenians Massacred.

LONDON, May 18.—Six thousand Armenians have been massacred at Van, in Armenia, Asiatic Turkey, between Iadriz and Erzerum, according to a despatch received in official quarters in London yesterday from the Russian consul at Erzurum, Persia.

This message is dated May 15. It adds that the Armenians are defending themselves to the utmost against the Turks and Kurds arrayed against them, but that help is urgently needed.

Big Reward For Subs.

LONDON, May 18.—"Owing to the reported presence of German submarines in the Mediterranean," says Reuter's Athens correspondent, "the British Legation has issued a notice through the local press offering a reward of $2,500 to anyone supplying information which will lead to their destruction."

A Costly Raid.

GENEVA, May 18.—Information has been received here that aviators of the allies have inflicted damages amounting to more than $2,000,000 to the tanneries at Strassburg which are working on material for the German army.

of the retention of Premier Salandra at the head of the Cabinet has put an end to the war riots throughout Italy, there were many demonstrations of rejoicing yesterday. These were particularly impressive at Milan, Florence, Naples, Messina, Bologna, Palermo and Catania.

The outbursts at Genoa Saturday night attained serious proportions. There was hand-to-hand fighting between partisans of war and the pacifists. Twenty policemen were wounded before order was restored.

The excitement at Milan subsided on receipt of the news of Premier Salandra's retention. The general strike there passed off without serious incident, although there was a demonstration in favor of war on the part of a crowd estimated at 40,000. Similar demonstrations occurred at Florence, Naples, Messina, Bologna, Palermo and Catania.

The demonstration at Bologna developed into a free fight between the factions for and against war. At Genoa Saturday night's crowd attempted to pillage the shops of gunsmiths, but were held in check by troops.

The Germanophile press has been disordered by a mob of attackers, some plebeian. The chief editor of The Vita was mauled in the street, and his paper will appear no more. Another German organ, The Concordia, is at its last gasp. The entire staff has resigned.

"Smartness and Bravery." ...

LONDON, May 18.—A copy of the Cologne Gazette of May 10 has just been received here. It contains an editorial headed, "To Neutrals," and is as follows:

"The Lusitania was for us a hostile ship; to destroy it was our right and duty.

"We are now the objects of bitter rage and are called huns, barbarians and murderers, simply because German smartness and bravery accomplished a brilliant stroke.

"But now the neutrals are warned.

"They have seen the bloody seriousness of our submarine warfare, and let them abstain from further foolhardiness, for the fate of the Lusitania will be shared by other English steamships and every neutral who trusts himself to their courts the fate which overtook the passengers of the Lusitania.

"The abuse of the neutral press up to now can be dismissed as an expression of naivete which was not conscious of the gravity of the affair. If the abuse continues it will no longer be naive, but impertinent."

S.S. Transylvania Safe.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Anchor Line steamer Transylvania passed safely through the war zone about the British Isles and arrived at Greenock, Scotland, at 3 o'clock on Monday morning. It was announced by officials of the Cunard Line, to which the Transylvania was under charter.

The condition of the Belgian refugees in certain parts of Holland is appalling. At Rotterdam you can see over 400 human beings crowded into one barge, living on it like vermin, and with little more decency than vermin.

They must exist somewhere, and Holland is doing all she can; she is, indeed, performing prodigies. At Berg-op-Zoom there is a camp of 3,000 refugees living in tents amid a quagmire of snow and slush. Two families live in each tent. Their bit of smoky fire is made in an old pail. Their diet is coffee, bread with a little butter, and bacon soup.

They sleep on straw, all crowded together, men and women, oldsters and youngsters, infants and grandmothers. And yet they prefer this life to life in Belgium, and they are sure that those who have ventured back to Belgium will return, if they can, to the lesser horrors of the Dutch camp.

If I thus raise ever so little the curtain behind which is proceeding the ineffable, unparalleled, and hardly conceivable tragedy that in its completeness and its dread overtops all previous national tragedies, my aim is not merely to harrow the feelings and excite the urgent pity of readers, but to assist them to realize the vastness of the task which now confronts the world's charity.

Every home in Belgium wants help. A million and a half persons in Belgium live from day to day on the mercy of soup kitchens. Unless men, women and children are to die of starvation over 80,000 tons of food must be brought into Belgium every month, and even this will only give to each individual half the quantity of food that is given to a soldier. It will be the barest subsistence. Its cost will amount to about $5,000,000 a month.

Sewing Wounded Hearts.

A Russian surgeon named Zeldler reports 31 patients who recovered from stab wounds of the heart in the hospital at Obuchow. Prompt and rapid operation is the probable reason for this good showing.

The patients were all put under the influence of ether very soon after the injury, part of the chest wall was removed, the heart lifted from its bed, and the stitches quickly introduced between pulsations. The bony chest wall over the heart was not put back in place, that organ being left covered only by skin and muscle. This was done to give the heart room to expand and to prevent adhesions from embarrassing the heart's action. Several of the patients are at their daily work after seven years since the operation.

Premier Borden Has Become a Philosopher

Politicians at the capital are much interested in Premier Borden's new way of facing trouble by going fishing. Close observers state that the Premier has passed through three stages in his treatment of public affairs and that going fishing is the best one of the three.

Very early in the game, while the Premier was still unaccustomed to power, he developed Job's ailment when things went wrong. That is to say when he got into hot water in the House of Commons he came to boil. In persons of strong character like Job and Premier Borden this is not an affliction so much as a personal expression of indignation at another sore touch from fate, something half way between temper and temperament.

But this phase of statesmanship was soon outgrown and the Premier entered upon the next stage of his evolution which was a certain acrimony of retort when pestered by the Opposition. This stage did not last long because the Premier is a kindly man, gentle in his nature, and regardless of the amenities. Besides anger is a wasting emotion and hard on the constitution, meaning one's own constitution, also the British North American Act.

The third and perfect stage has just been achieved by the Premier—he has become a philosopher and his going fishing to escape Bob Rogers' importunities shows it. No one knows just where he caught it but it was probably from studying Marcus Aurelius who has a lot to say about letting things take their course and Frank Cochrane who hasn't a word to say one way or another no matter what happens. Each, in his own fashion, is a typical stoic and when Premier Borden grafts on their example the mellow precepts of Izaak Walton's Compleat Angler he has a combination that is hard to beat. Moreover there is something Napoleonic in this way of handling a problem. It was a maxim with that great commander that almost any letter would answer itself in a month which is to say that time is the wisest counsellor and turns more hard corners than any premier in the business.

Nobody in Ottawa believes that it was mere pleasure that took the Premier a-fishing. It was tactics. The Premier probably got his hint from the conduct of a famous general in the American Civil War who took a day off to go fishing when the campaign was at its fiercest. It is not related that the general caught any fish but he did his fishing where the whole army could see, thus re-establishing the morale of his troops and incidentally thinking out a plan to surround the enemy. The soldiers naturally argued if the old man could fish, things couldn't be so bad and took heart. Something like this Premier Borden's absence gives the Cabinet space to reflect, to feel out public opinion and, if necessary, to back up and they can blame it all on the brook trout.

Of course the case of the American general and Premier Borden does not exactly on all fours because the general fished where everybody could see him and the Premier does his fishing in absolute privacy, no closer to a telegraph wire than five miles and only occasionally taking a peek the way Speaker Landry did when he

the ridge of the Laurentian Mountain at Kingsmere and escape notice from the West Block. If Bob Rogers had a hot thought to communicate he would make even less of that eleven miles than the crow does and then Premier Borden's peace of mind would be shattered.

The weight of evidence is that Premier Borden's hiding place is some where in the lowlands where he can let well enough alone without observation from those who would make it worse by a general election. The call of the wild is, of course, a mere excuse because Bob Rogers and Doctor Reid are calling wildly enough to suit anybody with an ear for that kind of music. Getting next to nature is another pretext that won't wash because there is plenty of nature right at home. Ottawa is now clothed in the beauty of spring. The grass and trees are as green as a newly elected M.P., the skies as blue as Finance Minister White's outlook, the mountains as purple as a peroration by R. B. Bennett. The river sparkles like a silver shield and Dimmy Murphy's barges dance upon the tide. The Rideau Canal has been turned on again. Now that the warm weather has come the sunsets, always highly successful, can be viewed with comfort. The moonlight is at its old work and the Ottawa poets are turning up. The Chateau Laurier has spread its awnings and the nicest people in town are taking tea on the terrace. In fact Ottawa is at her best.

All of which goes to show that it wasn't nature that Premier Borden wanted to get next to but a certain element of human nature that he wanted to dodge when he went fishing. The Premier learns from the fish how to run the Dominion of Canada. He takes lessons from their placid disposition, their unblinking outlook on earthly affairs and their occasional eagerness when the bait is big enough, as for example when one hundred and fifty million dollars is to be distributed among Conservative patriots with things to sell.

Fishing is part of Premier Borden's philosophy—it is the outward and visible sign of a lot of hard thinking. It will be the Premier's fate, as it is every angler's, to have the biggest fish get away, but what is his story beside Bob Rogers' who had a general election get away from him after he actually had it on the hook?

Being a philosopher behind him to sit on the lid. Sir George Foster is the acting premier. Sir George has passed the dangerous age. No more nests of traitors for him, no more feverish testimonials from Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Sir George is now a philosopher pure and simple. He looks back at politics over his shoulder. He is as safe to leave behind as Sir to Mr. Perley, who is warning a character for somebody in the high Commissioner's office in London. One philosopher can trust another. Sir Robert Borden has the greatest confidence in Sir George Foster.

Meanwhile practical measures are not neglected. Before Premier Borden went fishing a great howl had come from Toronto against a general election. It was felt in Ottawa that Toronto couldn't be well because never before had she said a word against a Conservative Government. Past experience was that Toronto would swallow anything so that these signs of a weak stomach were viewed with alarm. Two days after Premier Borden disappeared with rod and reel Bob Rogers was asking Toronto to hold out her tongue, and Tom White was feeling her pulse. The consultants gathered at the King Edward Hotel and the verdict was that tance in the scope of its work, marks Federation of Ontario which is celebrating its second birthday here on Friday, May 21st, with its annual business meeting in the afternoon and in the evening its annual dinner with Sir Wilfred Laurier Mr. N. W. Rowell, Sir Lomer Gouin and Hon. George P. Graham among its guests. The Federation's officers and most of its members are young men and the movement, quite separate from any of the official organizations of the Liberal party represents the young man's place and influence in the Liberal party and in Ontario politics.

Just two years ago the Federation was formed by a union of the twenty-two Liberal Clubs then existing in the Province. Today the Club membership has arisen to sixty-three with an individual membership running into the thousands.

The Annual Business Meeting on the 21st under the Presidency of Dr. Howard Spohn, Penetanguishene, will see a number of live subjects discussed, among them the following—"The Federation and the War," "The Individual Club Problem," "The Federation and the Clubs" and "The Federation's Ideals." These discussions will be led by young men from various parts of the Province. Particular interest is sure to attach to the subject of "The Federation and the War." Ever since the beginning of hostilities, the Federation and its clubs have been holding patriotic meetings, distributing literature on the war and doing their share in the propaganda for recruits and for a realization of the seriousness and the high honor of the task before Canada and the Allies. Further schemes of service along these lines are to be discussed.

The following list of Clubs in the Federation will give an idea of the wide-spread extent of the movement:—Ameliasburg, Aurora, Barrie, Belleville, Berlin, Blackwater, Bond Head, Brantford, Brantford, Brimston, Burlington, Caledonia, Cardinal, Cayuga, Clifford, Clinton, Cobourg, Forest, Georgetown, Hagersville, Hamilton, two Harriston, Iroquois, Jarvis, Kettleby, King City, Kingston, Kilmory, Kinnmount, Lansdowne, London, Mallorytown, Matheson, Maynard, Midland, Milton, Mitchell, Morrisburg, Mt. Pretended "War Taxes" Do Not Produce the Revenue Expected

The "War Budget," brought down by the Hon. Mr. White went into effect so far as tariff matters generally were concerned on February 12th last. The stamp tax, however, was not levied until April 15th. Thus the last fifteen days of April was the first real test of Mr. White's Pretended "War Taxes" as a Revenue Producer.

What is the Result.

Instead of an Increased Revenue as was predicted by Mr. White it has fallen off over two million dollars over the preceding month.

STARRY WONDER

The Changing, Drifting, Crumbling Constellations.

NOT SO PLACID AS THEY SEE

They Are All in a Whirling, Restless Rush, Preparing to Assemble in Other Formations—Wild Flight Earthward of the Andromeda Nebula.

"That spectacle," said a friend mine one night, pointing up to the starry sky, "always overwhelms me with a sense of unchangeableness."

"Yet," I replied, "it is the grande type of continual and stupendous change that the imagination could possibly conceive. Its apparent unchangeableness is that of a distant landscape seen by a flash of lightning, the wheel of a racing auto seems to be motionless. Your whole lifetime is but lightning flash against the spinning wheels of the universe. The entire history of the world since the traditional time of Adam is but a lightning flash in the existence of the sidereal systems."

"They are all in motion, and they are all changing within themselves. Look yonder at that rich part of the Milky Way, where the millions of apparently crowded stars resemble luminous clouds. If you could stand watching those star clouds for a million years instead of a few moments they would shift and roll before your eyes like the whirling vapors of an advancing thunderstorm."

"The astronomer arrives at a knowledge of the fluctuations of the universe by projecting his imagination back into the past and forward into the future. He gazes through a telescope which penetrates time instead of space. Lenses gather together and bend to focus beams of ages instead of rays of light. With its aid he sweeps all past and coming aeons into the field of his mental vision and strives to view the in the mass, as they are seen by the 'ancient of days' himself."

"It is in this way that we know that all these brilliant constellations, which to the eye of the casual looker have not altered their outlines since recorded history began, are in reality mutable and ephemeral as so many swarms of snow crystals."

"Yes; it is no exaggeration to affirm that the firmament of stars would appear to an eye endowed with immortal vision as restless and as swiftly variable as a winter storm sky filled with eddying flakes."

"Ursa Major, the Great Bear, like the Lion, Taurus the charging Bull, Orion the mighty Hunter, the Southern Cross, the Northern Crown, the Lyr the Whale, the Scorpion, the Scale, Virgo the Virgin, Hercules the Doer, Deeds, Draco the Great Dragon, Ophiuchus the Serpent Bearer, the whole refulgent cycle of the zodiac from Aries round to Pisces, all these, with out exception, and every starry company in the whole sky that mankind has admired and made legends about are breaking up, crumbling, drifting asunder and preparing to assemble in

Borden's absence gives the Cabinet space to reflect, to feel out public opinion and, if necessary, to back up and they can blame it all on the brook trout.

Of course the case of the American general and Premier Borden are not exactly on all fours because the general fished where everybody could see him and the Premier does his fishing in absolute privacy, no closer to a telegraph wire than five miles and only occasionally taking a peek the way Speaker Landry did when he was on strike from the Senate. But the purpose is the same and similar results are anticipated. The best guesses at Ottawa are of the opinion that the Premier buries himself in the wilds of the Gavieneau, which are just wild enough to be within reach of the newspapers if you want to drive in for them. Outside of that however, the Premier's retreat is as dark a secret as Mosé's grave or Ham Burnham's real thoughts.

It is quite certain that Premier Borden did not go to Kingsmere although there is a mere there and possible fish. Kingsmere is only eleven miles from Ottawa as the crow flies and is up in the mountains. Although it is a good place from which to keep tabs on Parliament Hill it is an equally good place for Parliament Hill to keep tabs on Kingsmere. A conspicuous figure in public life like Premier Borden could not stand on from Toronto against a general election. It was felt in Ottawa that Toronto couldn't be well because never before had she said a word against a Conservative Government. Past experience was that Toronto would swallow anything so that these signs of a weak stomach were viewed with alarm. Two days after Premier Borden disappeared with rod and reel Bob Rogers was asking Toronto to hold out her tongue, and Tom White was feeling her pulse. The consultants foregathered at the King Edward Hotel and the verdict was that Ottawa would have to go slow.

Bob Rogers was particularly alarmed. It seems that Winnipeg and other large cities are developing the same symptoms—violent retching and nausea. In fact somebody or something threatens to take the Win out of Winnipeg for Bob Rogers and he is in favor of operating on the patient at once.

MINORITY PRESIDENTS.

Elections That Were Not In Accord With the Popular Vote.

One on God's side is a majority, said Wendell Phillips. Luckily for American presidents majorities are not required, else a good many of them never would have reached the White House.

Pennsylvania's only president, James Buchanan, had nearly 40,000 fewer votes than his competitors. Old Rough and Ready Taylor landed the job with only 47 per cent of all the ballots cast.

Lincoln was a decisive minority president, and he went to the White House with only forty out of every hundred votes that were polled. Woodrow Wilson got into office by an almost equally slim majority, having a trifle more than 40 per cent of all ballots.

Neither time he was chosen president did Grover Cleveland have half the votes of the United States with him. Strangely enough, the other time he was nominated and when he was beaten by Harrison, Cleveland, although the loser, had the greater number of votes by nearly 100,000.

Hence Cleveland won twice on a minority, but lost once with a plurality.

Tilden had not only more votes than Hayes, but more than all his competitors combined, yet he wasn't president. Garfield, like Hayes, was a minority winner.

There seems to be as great a lack in a minority as in the divine right of majorities.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Turn About.

Mr. Kipling, while on a visit to Mr. Hardy, went to see a house which the author of "Life's Little Ironies" thought would suit him. When Mr. Kipling moved out of earshot, Mr. Hardy observed to the occupant:

"I may mention to you that this gentleman is no other than Mr. Rudyard Kipling."

"Is that so?" she replied. "I never heard the name before."

Presently Mr. Kipling, in turn, found himself alone with the lady and remarked:

"Possibly you may not be aware that the gentleman who brought me here today is Mr. Hardy, the eminent author."

"Oh, indeed," was her reply. "I don't know his name."—London Express.

Look under at that rich part of the Milky Way, where the millions of apparent crowded stars resemble luminous gaseous star clouds for a million years stand of a few moments they would drift and roll before your eyes like the whirling vapors of an advancing thunderstorm.

"The astronomer arrives at a knowledge of the fluctuations of the universe by projecting his imagination back into the past and forward into the future. He gazes through a telescope which penetrates time instead of space. Its lenses gather together and bend to a focus beams of ages instead of rays of light. With its aid he sweeps all past and coming aeons into the field of his mental vision and strives to view them as the mass, as they are seen by the scientist of days' himself.

"It is in this way that we know that these brilliant constellations, which to the eye of the casual looker have altered their outlines since recorded history began, are in reality as stable and ephemeral as so many clouds of snow crystals.

"Yes; it is no exaggeration to affirm that the firmament of stars would appear to an eye endowed with immortality as restless and as swiftly variable as a winter storm sky filled with drifting flakes.

"Ursa Major, the Great Bear, Leo the Lion, Taurus the charging Bull, Orion the mighty Hunter, the Southern Cross, the Northern Crown, the Lyre, the Whale, the Scorpion, the Scales, the Virgin, Hercules the Doer of deeds, Draco the Great Dragon, Ophiuchus the Serpent Bearer, the whole fulgent cycle of the zodiac from Aries round to Pisces, all these, without exception, and every starry company in the whole sky that mankind has admired and made legends about, are breaking up, crumbling, drifting under and preparing to assemble in

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 17.—Crop damage that may amount to 100,000,000 bushels resulted today in a swift advance of the price of wheat. Although somewhat unsettled at the close, the market finished 1½¢ to 4½¢ above Saturday night's level. Other staples, too, showed gains—corn ¾¢ to 1½¢, oats ¾¢ to 1½¢, and provisions 5¢ to 15¢.

Corn turned up grade when the fact became evident that a bulge was in order for wheat. Previously, the bears had the advantage, owing to favorable weather, both in the United States and in Argentina. Afterwards some attention was given to predictions of frost in the domestic belt.

Oats merely reflected the strength of other cereals. Shorts covered. Provisions hardened with grain. A break in the price of hogs was not a sufficient offset.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, May 17.—Influenced by the rainfall in the past few days in the Canadian west, selling pressure started from the opening. The sagging prices were only of short duration, damage reports from the winter wheat belt from the United States starting to come, which checked the decline. At noon May was at $1.60½, July $1.58½, and October $1.23½, which shows ¾¢ to 1½¢ under the high points earlier in the day. The trading in futures was light. There was a fair demand for Nos. 3 and 4 wheat. All grades of oats were asked for except No. 2 C.W. Low-grade barley was also wanted, and in addition, lower grades of cash flax were in demand. Offerings of all the grains wanted were not equal to the requirements. Wheat futures closed ¾¢ to 1½¢ higher, cash 1½¢ to 1½¢ higher, oats ¾¢ to 1½¢ lower, and flax ¾¢ to 2¢ higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, May 17.—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for grain and flour today, and the market in consequence is dull. The local trade in coarse grains is also very quiet, but the tone of the market is firm. Sales of a few cars of Argentine corn were made at 80½¢. Domestic demand for flour was slow, but there is a very good demand for all lines of millfeed. Butter is firm, with a fair demand. Cheese is quiet, there being no demand from English buyers at present prices. Eggs active and firm. Dressed hogs have advanced 50c to 75c per 100 pounds.

DRIVING THE PEOPLE FROM GOD AND BIBLE

The Doctrine of Demons Is Responsible.

Satan's Successful Method — Why God Permits Darkness For Light — Faith and Love Tested — Responsibility of Preachers — God Slandered — Everybody's Duty — Truth Soon Triumphant.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Pittsburgh, May 9.—Pastor Russell gave two addresses here to-day. We report the one from 1 Timothy 4:1, 2. It is a severe arraignment of education and especially of ministers, notwithstanding its moderate language. The Pastor declared that we are gradually awakening to the fact that the world does not love God, and that few of the churches recognize Him as the gracious Heavenly Father. Although the Bible tells us that God is Love, that His mercy endureth forever, and that from Him comes every good and perfect gift, nevertheless the doctrines of demons instilled into our minds from childhood have hindered us from appreciating these statements.

Back in the Second Century, when Bibles were very expensive and few people could read, Satan laid the foundation for gross errors. The clergy began to claim that the bishops were successors to the twelve Apostles, thus implying that their teachings were of equal authority. Nobody was allowed to preach unless authorized, or ordained, by the Apostolic Bishops. The result was the separation of the Church as the clergy—the public being called children of the Church, or sometimes the laity.

Conditions During the Dark Ages.

Later the Apostolic Bishops, with Emperor Constantine, started creed-making. Thereafter creeds took the place of Bible study; for the Emperor decided that the Nicene Creed was the standard of Orthodoxy, and that whoever differed from its teachings was a heretic and subject to persecution. This condition lasted twelve hundred years. When we consider how much error could be brought into the Church in twelve centuries, it is no wonder that our creeds are more than half error, and that the doctrines of demons so leavened the whole mass that it became injurious to spiritual health.—Matthew 16:6, 11, 12; Luke 13:21.

Then the authority of the Apostolic Bishops began to be questioned. The Bible began to be sought and studied, but all who did this were esteemed heretics. Finally the people insisted that they be permitted to read the words of Jesus and the original Twelve. The pseudo-apostles (Revelation 2:2) were forced reluctantly to give the people the Bible in the vernacular. Both Catholics and Protestants warned the people that the other's edition was especially wrong, although, as a matter of fact, there is little differ-

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. COOK, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

BELFRY OF BRUGES.

A Belgian Landmark That Goes Back to the Thirteenth Century.

Of all the cities of Belgium Bruges has best preserved its medieval characteristics. Bruges in Flemish means bridges, the city deriving its name from its many bridges, all opening in the middle to admit of the passage of vessels. It is connected with the sea, eight miles away, by the three canals from Ghent, Sluys and Ostend.

Dating from the third century, Bruges ultimately became the metropolis of the world's commerce. Seventeen privileged trading companies, from seventeen different kingdoms, settled there, while its importance was such that twenty ministers from foreign courts at one time had mansions within its walls.

The belfry of Bruges is probably the most famous in the world. It was built at the end of the thirteenth century. It is 353 feet high and possesses a carillon of forty-eight bells, regarded as the finest in Europe. It is really one of the detached municipal belfries which were erected in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries in certain continental towns as important symbols of their freedom.

Caxton, the first English printer, lived at Bruges, where he served out the Lion, Taurus the charging Bull, Orion the mighty Hunter, the Southern Cross, the Northern Crown, the Lyre, the Whale, the Scorpion, the Scales, Virgo the Virgin, Hercules the Doer of Deeds, Draco the Great Dragon, Ophiuchus the Serpent Bearer, the whole resplendent cycle of the zodiac from Aries round to Pisces, all these, without exception, and every starry company in the whole sky that mankind has admired and made legends about, are breaking up, crumbling, drifting asunder and preparing to assemble in their formations, like the new heaven that is to shine upon the new earth of the Apocalypse.

"Look up at Aldebaran, the red first magnitude star in the eye of Taurus. It is going away from you at a speed of thirty-five miles per second, seventy times as fast as the swiftest cannon ball. Every successive night it is 1,000,000 miles farther than it was twenty-four hours before, and yet its distance is so great that it has not appreciably diminished in brightness in thousand years.

"Then fix your eyes on a little star under the feet of Orion, which astronomers call Delta Leporis. It is flying away from us at the rate of sixty-two miles per second. That means a retreat of more than 5,250,000 miles between one night and the next, and yet Delta Leporis does not sensibly fade. It is like a distant steamer's light—so far away to begin with that no alteration of its distance can produce a change in its apparent magnitude until the time elapsed begins to bear some appreciable proportion to the space that intervenes.

"If you will regard another little star—the Whale, called Eta Cephei, you will be looking at a projectile as big as the sun, which is shooting toward us more than fifty miles a second. The great dog star, Sirius, which crossed the Milky Way hundreds of centuries before history began, is speeding in our direction at the rate of fifteen miles a second, and the little dog star, Procyon, is chasing after him with the losing stride of ten miles per second.

"The magnificent Arcturus is retiring into the depths of space with dignified step—three miles a second—while Alpha Centaurus, a twin star, each of whose components equals our sun, is racing a million miles nearer every twenty-four hours. The vast Orion nebula is retreating eleven miles a second, but that whirling wonder called the Andromeda Nebula is rushing hitherward 180 miles a second, or more than 15,000,000 miles per day!

"Luckily for us, it has plenty of sky room!

"In view of all this, do the heavens still seem to you so placid and unchangeable?"—Garrett P. Serviss in Washington Post.

There is no man that has not his out nor is there anything that has out its place.—Rabbi Ben Ashi.

"Kit" Is Dead.

HAMILTON, May 18.—Thousands of devotees will learn with deep feelings of regret of the death here Sunday of Mrs. Kathleen Blake Coleman, known to Canadian newspaper readers as "Kit," after two days' illness of pneumonia.

Source of Supply.
"What is one of the principal products of the West Indies?" asked the teacher.

The class remained dubiously silent. "Oh, come, think a little!" adjured the teacher, with patient encouragement. "Billy, tell the class where the sugar you use in your home comes from."

Billy pondered bashfully for a moment, then, blushing, blurted out: "Sometimes we buy it at the grocer's, but I think we usually borrow it from the folks who live next door."—Chicago News.

Then the authority of the Apostolic Bishops began to be questioned. The Bible began to be sought and studied, but all who did this were esteemed heretics. Finally the people insisted that they be permitted to read the words of Jesus and the original Twelve. The pseudo-apostles (Revelation 2:2) were forced reluctantly to give the people the Bible in the vernacular. Both Catholics and Protestants warned the people that the other's edition was especially wrong, although, as a matter of fact, there is little difference. The object was to prevent Bible study.

The same spirit is manifested everywhere yet. Whoever agrees with the creeds is tolerated by his own class. Whoever presents the Bible without sectarian bias is branded a heretic; and any vilification heaped upon him is reckoned service to God, however false. It is surprising to what extent we have been hoodwinked by the Adversary.

What Are "Doctrines of Demons?"

Doctrines of demons, the Pastor explained, are various falsehoods designed to misrepresent God's dealings and character, and thus to hinder God's Message from taking effect in human hearts. The Almighty could have prevented Satan from practicing deception and slandering the Divine character. But it is not God's purpose to use force in gathering the Church. He sent forth His Message, that those hearing should have opportunity of responding voluntarily.—2 Peter 1:4.

Personally and through his demon host, Satan seeks to misrepresent God's Message. (2 Corinthians 4:4.) He induced us to believe that before man's creation God had made a great place called Hell, supplied with fireproof devils and fuel to last to all eternity, and then made man, knowing that nearly everybody would go there.

Satan began this opposition to God by telling Mother Eve that her sin would not bring death, as God had said; and he has continued the statement until the whole world are convinced that when men die, they are more alive than ever. This is the fundamental doctrine of demons, upon which are based all the false doctrines that have troubled us. The Bible says, "The dead know not anything"; "The wages of sin is death"; and "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."—Ezekiel 18:4, 20.

If we had believed the Bible, we would have been spared the fear and delusions that have troubled us. But we neglected God's Word, and believed Satan. These doctrines of demons include Purgatory and masses for the dead. They include the work of spirit mediums; for as bishops and priests are deceived, so are spirit mediums. They think that they communicate with the dead; whereas the Bible makes clear that they are deceived by the fallen angels, the demons, thus giving the only confirmation of Satan's original lie, that the dead are alive.—Genesis 2:17; 3:3, 4.

Wellington's Plans.

Wellington's reticence once drew a protest from Lord Uxbridge, the brilliant cavalry leader, who lost a leg at Waterloo and became Marquis of Anglesey. On the eve of the great battle Uxbridge, although next to Wellington in command, knew nothing of his chief's plans for the morrow's battle. With trepidation he approached the duke. If Wellington were killed Uxbridge would become commander in chief. What was the plan? The duke listened patiently. "Tell me, Uxbridge, who will attack the first tomorrow, I or Bonaparte?" "Undoubtedly Bonaparte." "Well, Bonaparte hasn't given me any idea of his projects, and, as my plans depend upon his plans, how can you expect me to tell you mine?"—London Standard.

The Climate of Arabia.

Of Arabia's climate a writer says: "The desert air is extremely dry and clear, always invigorating, and even the great heat in summer is not as insupportable as in a damper climate, where the thermometer is probably lower. Climate has without doubt a great effect on the human character and intellect, and the nervous, high strung temperament of the Arab is to a great extent the creation of his environment of desert, with its splendid mirages to fire the imagination and sparkling air to keep the nerves alert."

Its Effect.

The lecture had been long, prosy and unrelieved by humor, but at its close a sad faced, earnest looking man strode emphatically to the stage and grasped the speaker by the hand. "Mr. Neverend," he said heartily, "I want to assure you your message to-night will have a marked effect on the life of every nervous, fretful, impatient man who heard you."
"Indeed!" cried the delighted lecturer. "You really believe it will affect their whole lives?"
"Undoubtedly," declared the sad faced man. "It will shorten them."

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,

May 17th, 1915.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening. Reeve S. C. Denison in the chair.

Present—Councillors, Walters, Wiseman, Waller, Carson, Dickinson, and Graham.

The minutes of the last regular and special sessions were read and confirmed.

A couple of letters from W. J. Paul, M.P., and one from an architect of the Public Works Department, Ottawa, were read. Their contents were in reference to the heating of the auditorium of the drill hall when completed. The architect stated that when the drill hall was completed and taken over by the Militia Department, the matter of heating the auditorium would be satisfactorily arranged.

Communications ordered filed.

A communication was read from the Sick Children's Hospital, enclosing an account, amounting to $67.00, for treatment rendered Angelo Castaldi, son of Nicholas Castaldi, of Napanee.

Laid on the table until later in the evening.

A communication was read from the Fire Brigade asking for the following supplies for the year 1915: 250 feet fire hose, 4 pairs of boots, and one rubber coat.

On motion it was decided to ask for tenders for the fire hose, and the Fire, Water and Light Committee were empowered to purchase other articles asked for.

Communications were read from Lieut. R. G. H. Travers, also the commanding officers of the 39th Batt., of Belleville. It would seem that there are certain necessities, not provided by the Government, needed for the men who are now preparing to leave on short notice for overseas service. The commanding officers are of the opinion that these necessities are needed to keep up the morale and high physical fitness of the troops. An effort is being made to raise $10,000 for this purpose, and Lieut. Travers thinks Napanee's share should be about $200.

Ordered laid on the table until the estimates are prepared, so that the council may have a clearer idea of the town's financial condition.

the by-law governing automobiles and motor cycles printed in pamphlet form and a copy sent to every owner of an automobile or motor cycle in this district.

The question of citizens and others interfering with the fire fighting appliances in the fire hall was under discussion. The Fire, Water and Light Committee will bring in a by-law which will put a stop to these liberties in the future.

The Streets Committee were instructed to get prices for a steel tank to replace the wooden one on one of the watering carts.

COMMISSIONER RICHARDS VISITS NAPANEE.

On Wednesday afternoon, Commissioner Richards of the Salvation Army paid an official visit to Napanee. He was received by the town council: representatives of the Army and Churches, and a large number of citizens. An address of welcome was presented to the Commissioner in the Council Chamber and an auto drive followed. Following is a copy of the address:

Napanee, May 19th, 1915.

Commissioner W. J. Richards,
In charge of Salvation Army
in Canada,

Sir,—As representing the citizens of the Town of Napanee in their corporate capacity as a Municipality, we welcome you on this your first visit to Napanee.

We congratulate you upon the most important position to which you have been appointed by the General of the Army, namely, to command in the Dominion of Canada. Your field is wide and your duties correspondingly onerous and responsible, but we trust that the mantle of your late lamented predecessor, Commissioner Rees, has not fallen upon unworthy shoulders.

The work of the Army apparently is a work which, in the main, unfortunately, is not reached by our churches. Our churches sometimes become too respectable so that instead of inviting the lower strata of our common humanity they rather repel. In addition to this, at least so it sometimes appears to the layman, the priest, the clergy, or the preacher, has not the time, has not the inclination, has not the training necessary to enable them to get out among the masses and give them the requisite

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The President then read his annual report which follows,—

Another year of progress in work of our Society has passed, a year of which we have reason to be justly proud. In every department advancement has been made and our financial statement is still one of particular strength, we should be satisfied that so much has been accomplished and that we have a small balance on hand.

ADDITION TO THE COLLECTION.

We have been especially fortunate in receiving historical material during the year just ended and particularly material for our museum. The present of twenty-two articles from Mrs. Maud Benson of Picton worthy of special mention. Mrs. Benson gave us utensils collected from the homes of the first settlers in the district, duplicates of which are very rare and in some cases we have only known samples. The addition of our already large and valuable collection of Stevenson papers received as all of this material has been, from Mr. J. H. Stevenson, was also of great value. Our County Ward Mr. Longmore, presented us with large spinning wheel and other to be used in weaving, and Mrs. Marsh Bogart loaned us a reel and Mr. Jacob S. Foster, presented a fine wheel. Mr. Jacob S. Foster has given us a number of valuable photographs and relics, one of which is the crackle used for breaking up flint, is the only known example in a Canadian museum.

Time will not permit me to mention the names of all those who have added to our collection but the gift loan from each is highly appreciated.

The commanding officers are of the opinion that these necessities are needed to keep up the morale and high physical fitness of the troops. An effort is being made to raise $10,000 for this purpose, and Lieut. Travers thinks Napanee's share should be about $200.

Ordered laid on the table until the estimates are prepared, so that the council may have a clearer idea of the town's financial condition.

A By-law governing automobiles and bicycles was introduced and passing through the various stages was finally passed.

Messrs. W. H. Dunbar, S. E. Scott, John Williams, G. B. Joy, Wm. Joyner and R. J. Dickinson petitioned the council to construct a sewer on Alna avenue, from Bridge street to Thomas street.

The work of the Army apparently is a work which, in the main, unfortunately, is not reached by our churches. Our churches sometimes become too respectable so that instead of inviting the lower strata of our common humanity they rather repel. In addition to this, at least so it sometimes appears to the layman, the priest, the clergy, or the preacher, has not the time, has not the inclination, has not the training necessary to enable them to get out among the masses and give them the requisite spiritual aid. Our view in this may be erroneous but of this we do feel very certain that the Salvation Army has done and is doing a great and noble work among the masses and more especially in the larger cities. If we value the life of one individual at say $1000, and then in our mind roughly estimate the number of men and women and children that have been saved to the state from lives of degradation by the noble work of the Salvation Army Officers, we can get some concrete estimate of the Army's work. This is the view point from the material point of view. From the spiritual point of view the Army's work is inestimable.

The Army's work starts at the foundation of our social structure and when this foundation stone is well and truly laid, the superstructure will appear worthy and honorable to the builder and an asset to our Country and our King.

We are sure that the present horrible and devastating war in which our Country and almost the entire civilized world is at present engaged has your earnest and prayerful attention. We believe the cause for which we fight is right and true; we do not believe that we could as a nation, standing for righteousness and plighted word, have refused to take up the gage of battle thrown down to us by a ruler of overweening and unscrupulous ambitions; we deplore the sacrifice of our country's manhood and we trust that before many moons have passed that victory will have been achieved and the ignoble hand of the militarist be put down forever and may we further hope that the magnitude of our country's sacrifices be compensated by the permanent spiritual upheaval that will ensue.

In conclusion let us again welcome you among us; may your stay be pleasant and may your labors here and wherever your duty calls be fruitful.

For the evening meeting Grace Church officials placed their church at the disposal of the Army.

Everything speaks for a big day at Picton on Monday next, Victoria Day. There is a splendid list of entries for the horse races, fast riders from Kingston, Belleville and Trenton, have entered for the motor cycle races. The baseball game between the Belleville Ontarios and Picton, promises to be a very interesting feature. Therefore our readers who visit Picton on that date, will spend a most enjoyable time.

PUBLICATIONS.

The sixth volume of our "Past and Records" has just been received from the printer and each member entitled to a copy free. To 1 members the price is twenty-five cents.

This little volume contains most interesting articles by Mr. S. Herrington. The first, "Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte" is a story of the manner in which settlers along the Bay established themselves in the wilderness. The history of these people has been written before, but this is the first time we have been told how they did things which were necessary to start in the new country. The second article, "The Court of Requests" is founded on material taken from an old book which has been loaned to the Society by Mr. F. W. Armstrong, Bath, entitled, "Records of the Court of Requests, Bath." This tells of the procedure in the first junior debt court of our country. By writing a volume Mr. Herrington has added more to his already long list of valuable works on our history.

OUR OPEN MEETINGS.

During the year we held eight public meetings, each of which has been a decided success. The programs have been as follows:

Oct. 30th, 1914—"The Red River rebellion (1869-70) by Prof. H. Mich Nov. 27th, 1914—"The Early Schoolmasters in Canada," Dr. W. Parkenham.

Dec. 11th, 1914—"Wellington and Waterloo Campaign," by Prof. J. Morison.

Jan. 22nd, 1915—"Conditions Germany as I saw them before War," Prof. A. E. Lang.

Mar. 5th, 1915—"The War and Militarism," by Dr. W. S. Milner.

Mar. 19th, 1915—"The Thirty Year War," by Prof. John Dall.

April 23rd, 1915—"France and the French People," by Prof. John Squire.

May 14, 1915—"Exploration as a Product of the Fur Trade," by Lawrence J. Burpee.

Our only disappointment during the season was occasioned by the serious illness of Dr. F. H. Snow, of the University of Toronto, who was to have lectured in February on "Russia: the Russian People." Dr. Snow had promised to come at some future date.

The interest which the public has taken in these lectures warrants our continuing the course next season. The privilege of hearing these men certainly appreciated and our reputation for good attendance remains high as that of any historical society in the Province. It has been a great pleasure to introduce these men to Napanee audiences.

CONCLUSION.

The various departments of our work continue to be active, and our Society has made good progress during the year. I was honored with the Presidency of the Ontario Historical Society at the annual meeting held in Ottawa last June, and with membership on the General Committee of the American Historical Association at the annual meeting held in Chicago in December, 1914. Both these appointments were unquestionably a result of the opportunity which have been given me in this Society. It has been a privilege to help your organization during the past year, and I again thank you for the honor conferred in the past.

Our Society is firmly established and we have an ever increasing museum and collection of documents, and on home, although unfortunately not fire-proof, is growing in interest each year. The election of officers was then held, Mr. M. C. Bogart occupying the chair. The following officers were unanimously elected:

Honorary Presidents—Walter S. Herrington, K.C., William J. Paul, M. P. President—Clarence M. Warner. Vice-President—Mrs. A. W. Grange. Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. John W. Robinson.

Committee—Mrs. Henry T. Forward, Uriah Wilson, Esq., Geo. D. Hawley, Esq., Dr. Raymond A. Leonard, E. R. Checkley, Esq.

After the election of officers, there being no further business to attend to Mr. Lawrence J. Burpee, of Ottawa, was introduced to the audience and delivered a most interesting address on "Exploration as a By Product of the Fur Trade." Mr. Burpee told of that wonderful group of men who carried their love for adventure and exploration along with trade and who in most cases would probably have preferred to leave the trade at home. He gave short accounts of the work of the few men who were most prominent in the exploration of our west and North-west, and told the part taken by each. His sketch of the work of Alexander Mackenzie was the most interesting. The whole address teemed with incidents in the lives of those brave men. Mr. Burpee presented the Society with his manuscript, and it will be printed in the near future.

After the address the President of the Society appropriately thanked Mr. Burpee for his kindness in coming to Napanee and giving such an interesting evening's entertainment. The only trouble was that it was too short, and we hope Mr. Burpee will come at some future date and give us another opportunity to hear him.

The meeting closed with

WILL GERMAN METHODS OBTAIN IN CANADA.

The unexpected happened! ! Mr. S. B. Sparks, a local gardener, who has owned and worked his land, with profit and credit to himself and family, for the past thirty years, had a strange experience, (FOR MADE IN CANADA). After several former attempts, on Wednesday, the 20th of May, 1915, a deliberate attempt was made, by the collusion of two supposed to be?? respectable and well-to-do farmers, to rob him of his privilege of owning and using his land for his own use and profit. But thanks to good English law, MADE IN CANADA, the attempt failed, with shame to themselves, and I hope every right thinking man will consider that a man who will act as a pirate to a neighbor is a brigand and a traitor to his country. Speaking low and going to church don't make a christian or a gentleman. Why the devil could give odds to some of the amateur gentlemen and christians, and beat them for a diploma in pulpit or pew, for the good book says, the devil a saint would be, but from last accounts from Belgium and France, the devil of a saint is he, even if he wears the Kaiser's uniform, or robs a dead British officer of his AND PUTS IT ON. Now, as one who likes to see fair play, and one who claims another country as his country but is proud to live in Canada, and claim it as his adopted country, I would say we ought to put the test words, and call out the guards, to find out if we have a traitor in the camp.

A CONTRAST.

A. Irene Cowan.

A mile of pines extended,
Along a wayside shore,

A couple, their way wended,
Towards nature's musical sound.
Their names were queerly blended,
Twas Miss Sunshine and Mr. Frown.

Miss Sunshine conversed gladly,
Being of Optimistic nature,
She told her companions of lovely things,
Of God and what he brings.
She sighed a bright, happy sigh,
And her mate did wonder why.

She saw violets with their delicate hue
And birds chirping in the air.
Trees of various kinds with their tall graceful bows,
She saw all the beauty, but suppressed the clouds.

She thanked Her Creator and Maker,
For all the wonderful foils of nature.
Her silvery laugh spoke tingling health,
She said she was rich in Gods wealth.

But her mate who was Mr. Frown,
Was not of that real spiritual sound,
He lost the oil of gladness and love,
And missed the blessings from above.
His pessimism caused indigestion,
And every other ails in question.

His bones were lean, His words gloomy,
He was deaf and blind to all that's bright,
And lost the culture of graceful height.
Ungrateful sighs he heaved,—heavy of heart,
And faulty to a better part.

Says Miss Sunshine to Mr. Frown,
Why not change your name to a better sound?
Why not loosen the hard cold walls,
And let flow in beautiful waterfalls?
Why not be sweet, true, full of love divine
And you shall be my friend all time?
Let God pour oil of gladness on your head,
And be reconciled, Miss Sunshine said.

Well says Mr. Frown, you and I disagree,
So how shall ye make me free?
You're all sunshine, while I frown,
What's the good in a better sound?
What's the use in being kind and good
On this land, long years I've stood,
I don't see any use of wasting time,
In being good and ever so cheerful,

BRILLIANT VICTORY WON BY BRITISH

LONDON, May 16.—In a battle exceeding in proportions, when the nature of the terrain and the conditions of the fighting are taken into account, anything that has taken place on the British front since the defence of Ypres last autumn, the British first army broke the German line between Richebourg l'Avoue and Festubert at midnight, on the greater part of a two-mile front, and at dawn the British storming columns pushed rapidly on and penetrated the German lines nearly a mile. This front is held for the Germans by Bavarian troops under their crown prince.

BEGUN AT MIDNIGHT.

The battle was begun Saturday midnight. It was prepared for by the secret massing of a great quantity of artillery and ammunition, and heralded by a terrific bombardment of the German lines with highly explosive shells. It took only a few minutes for the British guns to sweep away all the German trenches and tumble the earth about the ears of the surviving German occupants.

The first point bombarded was south of Richebourg l'Avoue, near La Bassée. Two lines of German breastworks were carried by the aid of the terrible guns in a few minutes. These lines extended on a front of 800 yards of German front line trenches, about a mile further south, and at dawn the bombardment began. In a few minutes the British infantry had rushed these positions and pushed rapidly on. By bombarding other German trenches, the British carried their success about 600 yards further south, where they crossed Festubert-Quinque road and advanced nearly a mile into the German lines. The fighting is still being continued, and is still going in favor of the British soldiers.

"Throughout the day our troops fought splendidly," reports Sir John French.

This magnificent success was won by the British first army, under the command of Sir Douglas Haig.

The British War Office also reports that all has been quiet at Ypres in the past 48 hours and that there has been nothing of importance to announce on the other parts of the British front.

In the fighting, early French official reports record the German losses as very high, mounting up in the thousands.

The German official version of this success is that the British launched an attack south of Lille and were repulsed at all but two points, where fighting was still proceeding.

FRENCH WIN NORTH OF YPRES.

In the section of the allied lines north of Ypres, where the Germans gained some success towards the end of April over the French colonial troops and badly cut up the Canadians, who checked their advance, the French delivered a successful counter-stroke Saturday and Sunday, capturing a number of German trenches north of Het Sas, and part of the Village of Steenstraete, and beating off three counter-attacks of the enemy between sunset and sunrise today. The third attack at sunrise was extremely violent, but the French soldiers held out with great endurance and inflicted enormous losses on the enemy. They captured six rapid-fire guns and a bomb-thrower. A fourth German counter-attack on Steenstraete was the German guns had been causing heavy losses. In the late afternoon Gen. French rode out among the troops to wish them good luck addressing to all a few inspiring words.

"The night was not very dark, there was no moon and scarcely a wind. All the dispositions were made silently, after dusk. We were a thing from 70 to 300 yards from enemy's front trenches, and many nasty obstacles had to be overcome. We had to depend on bayonets and grenades. It was too dark for shooting.

"Our left attacked at 11.30 o'clock and succeeded in storming the German line and overthrowing the defenders. Before long our left was dashing in with cold steel, penetrated two lines of German trenches and killed or wounded many of the defenders and made good front of about 800 yards in the German position.

INDIANS LOST HEAVILY

"Our extreme left attack was fortunate, as a maxim fire on flank was severe and accurate. The Indian troops on this side even penetrated thru the opening made by the left centre and soon began outflank and break down the defence in front of the original left of our attack.

"As the morning dawned a severe fire was opened from supporting positions in the rear of the German line and against these our heavy guns replied as soon as our right served greatly aiding our advance. Artillery work was better than that of last week.

DASHING ONSLAUGHT.

"At three o'clock in the morning fresh and formidable line of British infantry advanced from our right against the German trenches in the direction of Festubert. The British stormed the German lines with utmost gallantry and soon made

And you shall be my friend all time? Let God pour oil of gladness on your head, And be reconciled, Miss Sunshine said.

Well says Mr. Frown, you and I disagree,

So how shall ye make me free? You're all sunshine, while I frown, What's the good in a better sound? What's the use in being kind and good On this land, long years I've stood, I don't see any use of wasting time, In being good and ever so cheerful, Its like being in the midst of a storm, When all around me 'tis dark and fearful?

Mr. Frown continues. There's going to be a storm. And will sweep us off the earth. I dislike this walk, am sick of our talk, Let's turn back for fear of a dearth!

"No," persisted Miss Sunshine! There's the fair flow across the sky, Behind the clouds doth the sunshine. That's God's covenant with the children of Israel; I'm one of His sheep, and she breathed a peaceful sigh.

She tried her best to obscure darkness, From Mr. Frown's blinded eyes, But he was obstinate and very ill, His heart was lead; he's Being dead, No life or joy was his fair lot; He brought up the past, and alas! His soul within was burning hot.

But lo! Miss Sunshine was to much for him. In time the clouds dispersed. The oil of joy fattened his bones, Slowly disappears his ills and groans Miss Sunshine poured out her lovely rays, After long and prayerful patient days

In the end Mr. Frown wed Miss Sunshine, He loved her sun-shiny-soul-soul-time. Now they walked and talked, in that once-trod-pine-grove-alley, Under the mulberry tree, on a lover's wooden bench; With joy they hailed this spot and forth they sallied. The sign that betokened their new doublelight, Was the wellspring of love thro'out their married life.

Ruskin's Political Views.

Ruskin was once a candidate for the rectorship of Glasgow university and flew into a rage when asked by a deputation of the students whether his political sympathies lay with Beaconsfield or with Gladstone. "What in the devil's name," he exclaimed, "have you to do with either Disraeli or Gladstone? You are students at the university and have no more business with politics than you have with rat catching. Had you ever read the words of mine with understanding you would have known that I care no more either for Mr. Disraeli or Mr. Gladstone than for two old bagpipes with the drones going by steam, but that I hate all Liberalism as I do Beelzebub, and that with Carlyle I stand—we two alone in England—for God and the queen."—London Express.

And against the successful counter-stroke Saturday and Sunday, capturing a number of German trenches north of Het Sas, and part of the Village of Steenstraete, and beating off three counter-attacks of the enemy between sunset and sunrise today. The third attack at sunrise was extremely violent, but the French soldiers held out with great endurance and inflicted enormous losses on the enemy. They captured six rapid-fire guns and a bomb-thrower. A fourth German counter-attack on Steenstraete was repulsed Sunday afternoon. The French troops dug themselves into the ground, and now hold all that they carried on Saturday. The importance of the gain here, says the French official report, "is emphasized by the violent effort of the enemy."

IMPORTANCE OF SUCCESS.

The importance of the French success at Het Sas and Steenstraete, commentators on the war declare, lies in the fact that it rounds out the allied position at Ypres. When the Germans took about a mile and a half of territory from the French and compelled the British thereby to redress their lines below St. Julien, the Ypres salient was made sharper, and the Germans were able to bring up heavy artillery and fire all over the lost ground will have a tendency to lessen the effects of the German bombardment.

MORE GAINS ABOVE ARRAS.

The battle north of Arras continued with unabated fury Saturday and Sunday, with the enemy making repeated counter-attacks and the French troops continuing to register considerable successes. Southwest of Notre Dame de Lorette, the French attack on Saturday extended to the north beyond the sugar refinery at Souchez, and the French columns to the west of this position also drew nearer to it. A German counter-attack was repulsed to the slope of Notre Dame de Lorette in the night, and on Sunday the French forces successfully carried out divers operations with a view to the consolidation of their new front. In this terrible struggle, the French troops manifested great tenacity, pushing the enemy back a foot at a time, and thus gaining an eighth of a mile on the slope which descends from the Lorette plateau, near the above-mentioned refinery. Thruout Saturday night and Sunday morning a battle with hand grenades was fought, resulting still in some progress for the French.

BRITISH BAYONETS ACHIEVED GREAT VICTORY

LONDON, May 18.—The piercing of the German line is thus described by The Times' correspondent in northern France, under date of Sunday:

"Last night hell broke loose, and before sunrise this morning the British army had stormed the German lines at Festubert and Richebourg l'Avoue. After the failure on the 9th, the situation was reconsidered, and it was finally decided, for good and sufficient reasons to risk a night attack.

"It was necessary for Gen. French to act in order to support his allies, and, as he was unable to emulate their example and smash the German parapets with high explosives, it was to the British bayonets that the task of overthrowing the enemy was confided.

FRENCH INSPIRED MEN.

"He had not only to provide troops for the projected assault, but to hold a long length of trenches and consider the situation at Ypres, where and against the heavy guns piled as soon as our right served greatly aiding our advance. artillery work was better than of last week.

DASHING ONSLAUGHT.

"At three o'clock in the morning fresh and formidable line of British infantry advanced from our right against the German trenches in direction of Festubert. The storming of the German lines with utmost gallantry and soon themselves masters of a front of yards. They overwhelmed the German line and then penetrated the trenches, causing the enemy heavy losses.

"By eleven o'clock this attack penetrated for a mile into the German lines and promised to extend round the Germans, who still held to their front trenches between right and our centre attacks. had, in short, by noon overthrown almost completely the German front, and when I left the scene there seemed good hope that the inevitable German counter-attack would prove costly and ineffective."

Fell Nearly 6,000 Feet Then Righted Aeroplane

LONDON, May 18.—The British witness says: "One of our men had a thrilling experience. was alone, in a single-seated aeroplane in pursuit of a German machine. While trying to reload his machine gun, he lost control of the steering gear and the aeroplane turned up down. The belt round his waist opened to be loose, and the jerk of turn almost threw him out of the machine, but he saved himself catching hold of the rear centre seat. The belt slipped down his legs, and he hung thus head downward, making desperate efforts to disentangle legs, and the aeroplane fell from a height of 8000 feet to about 2500, swinging round and round like falling leaves. At last he managed to free his hands and reach the control lever with feet. He then succeeded in righting the machine, which had turned slowly over, completely looping the loop."

Gain of Nearly a mile Made by British Forces

LONDON, May 18.—The following official statement was issued by British War Office to-night:

"The first army has made a successful attack between Richebourg l'Avoue and Festubert, breaking the enemy line over the greater part of a mile front.

"The attack commenced at midnight to the south of Richebourg l'Avoue where we carried two successive l'Avoue of German breastworks on a front of 800 yards. A mile farther to south, another attack at dawn carried 1200 yards of German front trenches, and was pushed rapidly extending its success 600 yards further south by bombing along the German trenches. Here we crossed the Festubert-Quinque road, and advanced nearly a mile into the German line.

"The fighting still continues in favor, and thruout the day our British troops have fought splendidly.

"At Ypres all has been quiet for past 48 hours, and elsewhere on front there is nothing to report."

NOTHING LEFT BUT THEIR GOOD NAMES

KINGSTON, May 17.—Capt. George
T. Richardson of the 14th Regiment will come in for special mention as a result of his work at the front, according to letters received here this afternoon. He had charge of one platoon which did not and would not surrender when flanked by the Germans.

Col. A. E. Ross, M.L.A., in a letter received here today, says he has lost six horses by shells. In his letter,
Col. Ross says:

"We have been thru an awful week
—an experience one cannot put into words, but which will be imprinted on the mind for many days. To many of the battalions the fight came unexpectedly, and the Germans were over the Frenchmen and into the Canadian trenches quickly. The Germans had massed an enormous army in front of us, and made the attack at an opportune time for themselves.
They used a very oppressive gas which threw the Algerians into confusion.

STOPPED BY CANADIANS.

"They fled, and the burnt was thrown on our men. The left of the Canadians was in touch with the right of the Algerians and of course when the Germans attacked they let loose gas of a peculiar odor, which must be chloride and bromide, and it hurt the eyes much like formalin.
The Algerians could not stand it, but broke, and in a very short time
the Germans were over our trenches and on the Canadians. We were not only able to stop them, but in turn made a counter-attack. The result you know.

"There is not a brigade out of the whole division. An English Tommy packing along the road sized the whole situation up well when he said:
"Blame me if there is anything left of the Canadians but their good names." We have lost some of the finest men ever seen, but the position was held long enough to prevent the whole British army from being flanked and destroyed, or another experience of Mons."

HAS DONE HIS BIT.

"Don't worry, mother, I have one good eye left. I will soon be out of the hospital, and then I will be home.
I think I have done my little bit.
Sorry to say there are many Kingston boys who will never see home again."
Thus writes Private Sherbourne Wilder to his mother, Mrs. H. S. Wilder.
Private Wilder, in addition to losing one eye, suffered severe injuries to his leg. He is now in the Women's War Hospital in Devonshire.
He lost his eye in the battle of Langemarck, and also lost all his belongings.

KITCHENER WANTS NEW ARMY OF 300,000 MEN

LONDON, May 18.—In giving an outline of the operations of the allies in the house of lords today,
Lord Kitchener, the war minister, while expressing the greatest confidence in their ultimate outcome, again warned the public that great sacrifices already had been made and that greater ones would be exacted.

He made an appeal for 300,000 more recruits.

POINTS IN KITCHENER'S SPEECH

Call issued for 300,000 men to form new armies, in full confidence of heartly response.

Great sacrifices are being cheerfully made to meet the needs of a long war. Devotion to duty and cheerful acceptance of hardships shown by troops cannot be too highly praised.

Britain is forced to resort to the use of gas to "remove an enormous and unjustifiable disadvantage."

Canadians at Langemarck came gloriously thru an ordeal that would try the finest army in the world.

The Turks are being forced from positions of great strength in Gallipoli, Peninsula, and the situation

there is "thoroughly satisfactory."

The French offensive in Arras has been completely successful. "Important results" are to be anticipated from co-operation with the advancing British troops.

The morale of the allies in the west has never been higher than at present.

An adequate supply of munitions will shortly be provided.

The Russians now hold a strong line from the eastern Carpathians to Przemysl, and have made a strong offensive in Bukovina.

Gen. Botha has displayed military ability of the highest order in German Southwest Africa.

Indian troops have utterly routed
the Turks in Mesopotamia.

The attack commenced at midnight. The south of Richebourg l'Avoué, where we carried two successive lines of German breastworks on a front of 1000 yards. A mile farther to the north, another attack at dawn carried 1000 yards of German front-line trenches, and was pushed rapidly on, ending its success 600 yards further north by bombing along the German trenches. Here we crossed the Festubert-Quinque road, and advanced nearly a mile into the German lines. The fighting still continues in our favor, and through the day our brave troops have fought splendidly.

"So much for Mr. Marrophat!" Alan crowed, sitting down. "Foiled again! He can't stop us now!"

"Perhaps . . ."

"Why that perhaps? Why that tone?" he demanded sharply, struck by the foreboding her accents confessed.

"This isn't the only ferry. There's the Pennsylvania and the Lackawanna—and by hard driving he might even manage to catch the boat that connects with this from the Christopher street ferry of the Erie!"

"Impossible! I don't believe it! I won't!"

"Let's not," she agreed. "But, Alan . . ."

"Yes?"

"Promise me—if he should manage to catch up with us—you won't let him talk to you. I mean, don't let him—"

"No fear of that!" he asserted hotly. "If he tries to exchange one word with me—I only wish he would!"

She seemed satisfied with that; but the incident had served appreciably to chill their spirits. They accomplished the remainder of that voyage in a silence that was no less depressed because they sat hand in hand throughout.

Nor was their taxicab three minutes out of the ferry house on the Jersey shore—though the chauffeur, stimulated by Alan's extravagant promises, was doing his best to fracture the speed laws and escape arrest—when the girl's fears were amply justified; a shout from behind drew Alan's head out of the window on one side and the girl's on the other and proved to both that Marrophat had indeed found some way to make the crossing without great delay.

His touring car was within fifty yards when they first were aware of it; and Marrophat, standing on the running-board, was shouting inarticulately and flourishing an imperative hand; while the distance between them was momentarily growing less noticeable.

As Marrophat's car drew abreast Alan nodded and said quietly: "Don't be alarmed; I can attend to this gentleman single-handed."

And this he proceeded to demonstrate with admirable ease, even though called upon to do so far sooner than he had thought to be—thanks to Marrophat's hair-brained precipitancy. For, failing to influence the taxi driver by shouted demands or threats, or to gain the least attention from Alan, Trine's first lieutenant abruptly and surprisingly took his life in his hands and in one wild bound bridged the distance between the two flying cars and landed on the taxi's running-board.

"Stop!" he screamed madly. "Stop, I say! You don't know what you're fifty feet in the rear, while the taxi fled the tenement purlieu of the Hoboken waterfront and found its way into the broader streets of an unpretentious suburban quarter.

Not until they were well into the suburbs, with few dwellings near and no pedestrians to interfere, did Marrophat's purpose become apparent. Then, however—and it happened while Alan was looking back—the touring car drew in swiftly and easily and Marrophat, rising in his seat, leveled a revolver over the windshield and fired.

The crack of his weapon was practically coincident with a metallic thud beneath the rear seat of the taxicab.

Not for some moments did Alan appreciate the viciousness of the scheme. Surmising that the gasoline tank had been punctured by the bullet, he was inclined to believe that Marrophat hoped to stop the taxicab by depriving it, in course of time, of its fuel. And with this in mind he was presently surprised, as the cab took a corner, to see Marrophat's car stop at that corner and Marrophat himself get down. The brow of a hill intervened, shutting off sight of the blackguard as he knelt and lit a match. It was the girl who gave the alarm, suddenly withdrawing her head from the window to scream at Alan:

"He's fired the gasoline! It's flaming along the street, following the line of the leak—and catching up with us!"

Without pausing to put his hand to the latch, Alan kicked the door open.

"Jump!" he cried. "For your life—jump! As soon as that fame catches up with the tank—"

Simultaneously the chauffeur, over-hearing, shut off the power.

The three gained the sidewalk barely in time: the tiny trail of flames, almost imperceptible in the sunlight, was not a yard from the jet that spurted through the bullet hole in the tank. In the flutter of an eyelash the explosion followed. Had the cab been loaded with nitroglycerin its destruction could have been no more absolute.

There was a roar . . . and then a heap of smoking ruins.

Without waiting to admire the spectacle, Alan caught the arm of the girl and hurried her up the street, at the same time calling to the chauffeur to follow. And chance brought them to the next corner as another cab, farewell, hove into view. Promising its driver anything he might ask, in or out of reason, Alan gave him the address, and helped the girl in.

If Marrophat pursued Alan could see no sign of him. The second car made better time than the first. Unhindered, and as far as could be determined, without being followed, it covered the brief remaining distance in a gratefully short lapse of time.

The suburb dropped behind a maze chance to move aside, but seized him so fiercely by the wrists that he instinctively lifted to protect himself, and she fairly threw him half a dozen feet from her. He brought up with a crash against the wall even as the door slammed behind the girl.

When Alan, the first to recover, gained the sidewalk, she was already in the taxicab. Whatever reward she had promised the man, he whipped his machine away as if from the fear of sudden death.

And darting from the house hard on the minister's heels, Marrophat leaped into his own car and, as if he had not heard her threat or received substantial proof of her earnestness, tore off in pursuit.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

And the Rose.

Taking the dazed young man by the hand, as though he had been a child, the Reverend Mr. Wright led Alan back to his study and established him in a comfortable armchair beside his desk.

"Sit there and compose yourself, my dear young friend," he insisted in a soothing voice.

At the elbow of the Reverend Mr. Wright a telephone shrilled imperatively. With a gesture of professional patience he turned to the instrument, lifted the receiver to his ear, and spoke in musically modulated accents.

"Yes . . . Yes: this is Mr. Wright. . . . Ah, yes, Mr. Digby. . . . Not coming? But, my dear sir, Mr. Law is already here. I must tell you—"

He checked with a reproving glance for Alan, who was twitching his sleeve insistently.

"If you please," Alan begged, "let me speak to Digby at once. Forgive me—"

Reluctantly the minister surrendered the telephone.

"That you, Digby?"

"Alan! Bless my soul, what are you doing over there? Is Miss Trine with you? But how can that be possible?"

"Rose? No. What about her?" Alan demanded, stammering with anxiety.

"Why—one of my spies has just reported by telephone. He was going on duty this morning when he saw a young woman—either Rose or Judith—wearing a rough coat over boudoir dress—climb out of one of the basement windows of Trine's house. She was apparently in great distress of mind and anxious to escape without being seen from the house; but before my man—whose post of observation is in the third story of one of the houses opposite—could get to the street, she had been caught by several rough-looking customers, who rushed out of Trine's house, seized the girl, and made off with her in a motor-car bearing a New Jersey license number. I am sending men to watch the Jersey ferries. Call me up in an hour—"

Without a word of response, and without a word of apology to the Reverend Mr. Wright, Alan dropped the receiver, snatched up his hat, and fled that house like a man demented.

Rose, escaping from Trine's house, overpowered and made the captive of Trine's lowest creatures—gunmen possibly, of the stamp of that animal whom Trine had charged with the assassination of Alan the night before!

There was neither a motor-car in sight for him to charter nor any time to waste in seeking one. Alan could scarcely see a lamp smoking in a bracket the foot of the stairs.

Sounds of scuffling of feet were audible on the first landing. Alan dressed himself impetuously to staircase, gaining its top in a dozen leaps, and only in time to door slammed at the forward edge of the hall and hear a key turned lock.

A cluster of men blocked the He didn't pause to wait for it cleared, but threw himself head into their midst, and by dint surprise had gained the closed before they recovered and sought stay him.

Indifferent to them all, he shook knob and shouted: "Rose! Rose!"

Her cry came back to him, a stifled scream: "Alan! Help! Help!"

Backing away with a mad intention of throwing himself bodily against door and breaking it down, he was suddenly confronted by a hideous man—humanity—face of man all misshapen and swollen and disfigured with smears of dried blood and a bandage round his temples, but the less vaguely recognizable.

The words that streamed from distorted lips drove recognition.

"Gee, fellers, look't who's here! It ain't th' guy what threw me that girder this mornin'. Stand and let me kill th'—"

Without the hesitation of a beat Alan swung heavily for the jaw. The blow went solidly. The man fell like a poled ox.

Pandemonium ensued. Rallying their comrade, the ruffians attacked Alan with one mind and one i Murder would have been done and there had it not been for a banister-rail, which gave way, preventing the lot to the ground in the hallway.

Simultaneously the lamp on the wall was struck from its bracket crashed to the floor, its glass breaking and loosing a flood of sene to receive the burning wick explosion followed instantly. The hallway was a lake of flaming oil, and hungry flames were ing up the rotting wallpaper and ing into decayed baseboards and treads.

Still fighting like a madman testing every foot of the way, was borne down the hall and the front door. A scream of "I greeted him as he reeled out in open. It was echoed by a throats.

The doorway vomited men women of the tenement. They c it for a time, blocking both egress and ingress. By the time they broke and left the way clear a solid wall of flame stood behind it.

Thrice Alan essayed to pass barrier of fire, and thrice it threw back. Then, struggling and kneeling to release himself and try again, was seized by a brace of able-bodied policemen and rushed fifty feet the house before let go.

Lack of breath checked him momentarily.

He looked up, dashing from smarting eyes tears drawn by stifling clouds of smoke, and vaguely at the second story window where a woman leaning out and shrieking help.

That it was hopeless to attempt staircase he well knew. Dr side, he endeavored to come to Marrophat's hair-brained precipitancy. For, failing to influence the taxi driver by shouted demands or threats, or to gain the least attention from Alan, Trine's first lieutenant abruptly and surprisingly took his life in his hands and in one wild bound bridged the distance between the two flying cars and landed on the taxi's running-board.

"Stop!" he screamed madly. "Stop, I say! You don't know what you're doing! Let me tell you—"

He got that far but no farther. In the same breath Alan had flung wide the door and was at the fellow's throat. There was a struggle of negligible duration; Marrophat was in no way his antagonist's match; within three seconds he threw out both hands, clutched hopelessly at the framework of the cab, and fell heavily to the street.

The taxi sped on without pause, its driver deaf to the hails of innocent if indignant bystanders. Alan pulled himself together and looked back just in time to catch a glimpse of a number of loafers lifting Marrophat to his feet and helping him to the sidewalk of an unsavory-looking tenement, before the cab took a corner on two wheels . . .

"Not seriously injured, I fancy," he told the girl in response to her eager look. "Worse luck!" he added gloomily.

But it seemed that he was to have greater cause than this to complain of his luck, before that ride was ended. Three blocks further on a tire blew out with a report like a cannon-cracker, and the taxi lurched perilously, hesitated, slowed down, and limped dejectedly to the curb.

Alan and the chauffeur piled out in the same instant, the one standing guard—with an eye out as well for another cab—while the other assessed damages.

"Nothing for it but a new tire, sir," this last reported sympathetically. "It must have been a broken bottle or something like that—it sure did rip the usefulness clean out of that shoe."

"Go to it," Alan advised him tersely; "and if you make a quick job of it, I'll stand the cost of the new tire."

"But if another cab comes along while you're at it you'll lose us as quick as a wink. Here's my card, in case we have to desert you in a hurry; you understand this is a matter of life and death, and I'll have no time to settle up with you. But you can call at Mr. Digby's office and he'll fix things up to your satisfaction."

The man took the card and after a glance at the name touched his hat with more noticeable respect.

"All right, Mr. Law," he agreed; "anything you say." And forthwith got to work.

The rapidity with which he completed the change of tires proved him an excellent chauffeur, an adept at his craft; but the delay was one disastrous for all that. It worked together with what Alan pardonably described as the devil's own luck to bring the touring car in sight at the precise moment when the chauffeur was cranking up and Alan on the point of re-entering the cab. And though they were off again before Alan could close the door, the attempt was hopeless from the start.

And yet—whether or not because Alan's distaste for interference had been too convincingly demonstrated—the touring car for the time being contented itself with trailing about the next corner as another cab, careless, hove into view. Promising its driver anything he might ask, in or out of reason, Alan gave him the address, and helped the girl in.

If Marrophat pursued Alan could see no sign of him. The second car made better time than the first. Unhindered, and as far as could be determined, without being followed, it covered the brief remaining distance in a gratefully short lapse of time.

The suburb dropped behind a maze of streets where dwellings stood shoulder to shoulder and dooryards were scant. The car swept up to a corner house of modest and homely aspect. Two minutes more, and Alan was exchanging salutations with and making his bride-to-be known to Digby's good friend, the Reverend Mr. Wright.

Embarrassment worked confusion with the young man's perceptive faculties. As this moment approached when two should be made one who had gone through fire and flood, literally as well as figuratively, for each other's sake, incredulity drew a veil before his vision. He viewed the world as in a glass, darkly.

He was aware of a decently furnished minister's study; of two witnesses in the guise of unassuming womenfolk of the minister's household; of the Rev. Mr. Wright himself as a benevolent voice rolling sonorously forth from a black-clad presence; of the woman of his heart standing opposite him; of questions asked and responses made; of a ring that was magically conjured from some store apparently maintained against precisely similar emergencies; of a hand that took the hand that was to be his wife's and placed it in his; of his clumsy and witless bungling with the task of fitting that ring to the finger of his sweetheart's hand . . .

And then he was aware of a door that banged violently in the hallway; of the sound of a man's voice making some indistinguishable demand; that Rose's hand was suddenly whipped away, before he could fit on the ring; that the study door was flung open and that this animal of a Marrophat had precipitated himself into the room.

He opened his mouth to protest—and Marrophat silenced him with a cry.

"You fool! Drop that ring! Stop this farce! Don't you know whom you're marrying? That woman is Judith Trine, you idiot—not Rose!"

Blankly Alan turned to the girl.

Her flaming face, her sullen eyes, her very pose, from which the manner of Rose had dropped like a cast garment, confessed the truth of Marrophat's assertion. And as if this were not enough, Judith confessed it doubly with a sudden outbreak of such rage as never could have been brewed in Rose's gentle nature.

"You devil!" she cried—and threw herself in front of Marrophat with a spring as lithe as that of a leopardess. "Take warning now from me: keep out of my way forever after this—or take the consequences! God knows," she panted, "why I don't kill you as you stand!"

He was in her way, between her and the open door. She gave him no without a word of apology to the Reverend Mr. Wright, Alan dropped the receiver, snatched up his hat, and fled that house like a man demented.

Rose, escaping from Trine's house, overpowered and made the captive of Trine's lowest creatures—gunmen possibly, of the stamp of that animal whom Trine had charged with the assassination of Alan the night before!

There was neither a motor-car in sight for him to charter nor any time to waste in seeking one. Alan could only hope to find one on his way back toward the ferry. It must have been upwards of an hour before he came into a street which he recognized, by its dinginess and squalor, as that in which he had thrown Marrophat from the running-board of the taxicab.

And then, as he paused, breathless and footsore, to cast about him for the way to the ferry, a touring car turned a corner at topspeed and slowed to a stop before that selfsame tenement of the unsavory aspect to whose sidewalk he had seen Marrophat assisted by the loafers of the quarter.

And this touring car was occupied by some half-a-dozen ruffians in whose hands a young girl writhed and struggled when, immediately on the stop, they jumped out and wrestled her out with brutal inconsideration.

Like a shot Alan had crossed the street—but only to bring up nose to the panels of the tenement door, and to find himself seized and thrown roughly aside by a burly denizen when he grasped the knob and made as if to follow in.

"Keep back, young feller!" his assailant warned him viciously. "Keep outa this, now, if you don't want to get into trouble."

To the speaker's side another ranged, eyeing Alan with a formidable scowl. At discretion he stepped back and turned as if persuaded to mind his own business, then swung on his heel, caught the two in the very act of opening the door, and threw himself between them.

An elbow planted heavily in the pit of the stomach of one disposed of him for the time being. A blow from the shoulder sent the other reeling to the gutter. And Alan was in the tenement's lowermost hall—a foul and evil-odored place, dark as a pit the instant the door was closed, its murk relieved only by the flame of a kero-

CHAPTER XXIX.

Jailbird.

The period of restraint in durance vile suffered by one Thomas Barcus in consequence of conduct riotous, un-seemly, and in general prejudiced to the public peace of the New Bedford waterfront at half-past four in the morning, proved in the upshot far more brief than had been fondly hoped, not only by his just judge, but, singularly enough, by the misdemean-ant himself.

Taking everything gravely into con-sideration, including a person any-thing but prepossessing, the judge reckoned that, in default of a fine of one hundred dollars, a ten-day layup for repairs and repentance was not too much to mete out to the prisoner at the bar.

He was sentenced at 10 a. m. and it was little short of 10 p. m. when his post-prandial repose was disturbed by the rattle of a key in the lock of the door to his cell.

Sitting up, Mr. Barcus rubbed his eyes and combed his hair with his fingers.

"What did I tell you?" he observed resignedly. "It begins again already . . ."

Conducted with every evidence of disesteem on the part of his jailers to the office of the warden, he was ac-quainted with the fact that his fine had been paid by no one less than the judge himself: then present in portly and solicitous person.

"If only you had told me you were a friend of Mr. Digby's," the judge hastened to say as soon as the two were ensconced in the privacy of the judicial limousine, "I would have known better how to guide myself in this unfortunate affair.

"And if you will be good enough to indicate how else I may serve you . . ."

"Digby didn't offer any suggestions in his wire, I gather?"

"One moment: I have it here."

"Naturally I'd like a bath and a change of clothes," Barcus pursued while the judicial breast-pocket was being explored; "and I could do with transportation to New York by the first train out of this God-forsaken hole, and—"

"This is what Mr. Digby says," the judge interrupted, laboriously de-ciphering the message by the light of the telephone directory.

The information he gathered from the voice that answered the name of Mr. Digby over the telephone shook only momentarily Barcus' innate conviction that intimate acquaintance with battle, murder and sudden death was the inevitable reward of associa-tion with this friend of his heart.

"Alan being married to Rose Trine in Jersey City at this very minute!" he breathed skeptically as he emerged from the booth memorizing the ad-dress of the alleged officiating clergy-man. "I don't believe it; it's too sud-den."

Forthwith he engaged a taxicab to convey him to Jersey City, at top speed, for an exorbitant reward.

And when, from the forward deck of a ferryboat, he beheld a dense volume of smoke advertising a conflagration on the Jersey shore, not far from the waterfront, he shook a moodily ega-cious head.

"If Alan isn't mixed up in that, somehow," he declared, "he's missing a bet for once—and I'm a sorry failure as a prophet of woe and disaster!"

There was as much intuitive appre-hension as humor responsible for this remark; witness the fact that, on land-ing, he risked the delay required to turn aside and have a look at the fire.

ver, then fixed by ace of a man who was following in the hollow of the V—an evil white face that seemed somewhat vaguely familiar, somehow reminiscent of something strange that had happened in the history of Mr. Barcus.

At the same time, at the point where the V had paused, a wild uproar lifted up and, coincidentally, a wilder confu-sion became noticeable. A cry was audible—"Firebug! Lynch him! Lynch him! Lynch the firebug!"—and at this the mob turned as one man and streamed away in pursuit of an in-visible quarry, who chose to attempt his escape by a route directly oppo-site to that which would have led him within view of Mr. Barcus.

Startled, and of a sudden persuaded that there might have been more in his "hunch" than was sanely to be credited, Barcus started up and was on the point of stepping out of his cab, if with a rather aimless purpose, when he was stayed by sight of that evil white face returning the way it had come—still in the hollow of the flying V, which now made faster pro-gress, thanks to the disorganization of the mob by the chase of the alleged in-cendiary.

And now, Barcus saw, the man of the white face was not alone. There was someone with him—someone

, You Idiot—Not Rose!"

"Ighy didn't offer any suggestions in his wire, I gather?"

"One moment: I have it here."

"Naturally I'd like a bath and a change of clothes," Barcus pursued while the judicial breast-pocket was being explored; "and I could do with transportation to New York by the first train out of this God-forsaken hole, and—"

"This is what Mr. Digby says," the judge interrupted, laboriously deciphering the message by the light of a match: "Please see to immediate release of one Thomas Barcus, probably in jail in your jurisdiction for rioting on waterfront this morning. Pay his fine and instruct him to report to me in New York at earliest feasible hour. Give him all the money he wants and look to me for remuneration—"

"Eh?" Barcus interrupted, sitting up smartly; "what's that last again?"

Patiently the judge repeated the sentence from the message.

"Thanks. Please don't read farther. You might come to something that would spoil it. It's almost too beautiful as it stands," Barcus observed. "Law owes me five thousand or so liquidated damages—but I'll be reasonable. Frisk this burg for a fifth of that sum before train time—and I promise to ask nothing more!"

His private comment was: "I've suspected that this was a fairy-tale all along. Now I know it is!"

And this phase of incredulity persisted in coloring the complexion of his mind until the moment, some hours later, when the train connecting at Providence with the Midnight Express for New York pulled out of New Bedford bearing a transformed Barcus—almost impenetrably disguised in a bath, a shave and a haircut, an outfit of clothing originally tailored for a gentleman of discriminating taste, but no whit less disguised in the sense of affluence that goes with the possession of one thousand dollars in cash.

Not until a sound night's sleep had topped off the beginning of his rest in jail did Barcus come down to earth.

He demonstrated his return to common sense by making a round breakfast in Grand Central station before looking up the residence of Digby in of smoke advertising a conflagration on the Jersey shore, not far from the waterfront, he shook a moodily egacious head.

"If Alan isn't mixed up in that, somehow," he declared, "he's missing a bet for once—and I'm a sorry failure as a prophet of woe and disaster!"

There was as much intuitive apprehension as humor responsible for this remark; witness the fact that, on landing, he risked the delay required to turn aside and have a look at the fire.

It proved to be situated in the heart of a squalid slum—a wretched tenement of the poorest class, whose roof had already fallen in and whose walls were momentarily threatening to go by the time Barcus arrived on the scene.

At a considerable distance from him a small disturbance had broken out—a clamor of protesting voices lifting about the rumor of the mob—as a number of men, case-hardened roughs one and all, began to force their way in a V-shaped wedge through the throng, making toward its very heart, the point on the fire-lines nearest the burning building.

What this meant, Mr. Barcus had not the slightest idea. But his attention was first distracted by the maneucredited, Barcus started up and was on the point of stepping out of his cab, if with a rather aimless purpose, when he was stayed by sight of that evil white face returning the way it had come—still in the hollow of the flying V, which now made faster progress, thanks to the disorganization of the mob by the chase of the alleged incendiary.

And now, Barcus saw, the man of the white face was not alone. There was someone with him—someone whose head was bent, and face concealed, but who seemed to be feminine.

And so, Barcus afgued, why might it not be Rose Trine, suffering new persecution at the hands of her unnatural father's creatures?

He was too far away to make sure and attempt any interference; but he pointed White Face out to his chauffeur as the V reached a touring car on the edge of the mob and the woman was lifted in (unresisting and apparently in a dead faint), and when the touring car swung round and picked up its heels, the taxicab of Mr. Barcus trailed it as unostentatiously as if it was a pertinacious shadow.

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"I can highly recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking 'Fruit-a-tives' for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking 'Fruit-a-tives' after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case."

Mrs. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Duck farming is becoming more profitable year by year. People are learning that ducks are the hardiest of domestic fowls and are the easiest to feed. Matured ducks of the larger breeds are worth $1 to $1.25 each dressed. The feathers add a few cents to this.

Ducklings grow fast and reach a nice roasting size at two months, it being quite common to get a four pound fowl at this age. They are a great delicacy then, and as they bring a higher rate per pound than when matured it is considered most profitable to market them at a weight of three to four pounds. Their feed up to this time should consist mainly of bran or shorts wet to a thin mash with skim milk, adding a little cornmeal. Stale bread or crackers soaked with skim milk will also do nicely. They need a clover patch to run in. Garden stuff is excellent. A little cracked corn is needed in the last two weeks. In raising ducks to an age of six or eight months considerable grain is required in addition to the mash and green stuff.

From time of hatching to five days old provide the following mixture: Cracker or bread crumbs and cornmeal, equal parts by measure; hard boiled eggs, 15 per cent of the total bulk of crackers and meal; sand, 5 per cent of the total of crackers and meal. Mix with water or milk and feed four times a day.

From five to twenty days old the lar esteem than the White Peking. It is valuable for raising on a large scale and is the most easily raised of all. It is a very timid bird and must be handled quite carefully. It was imported from China in the early seventies and has steadily grown in popularity since its introduction into this country.

The White Aylesbury ducks are second to the popular Peking for market purposes and are bred in large numbers in Europe. In this country they are not so extensively bred as the Peking; neither have they been found so good as the latter.

The Colored Rouen duck is called deservedly popular throughout this country and is considered one of the most profitable varieties to keep. By some raisers the Cayuga is considered to be as good as the Peking for early markets, and the claim is made that it can be grown as cheaply. The Indian Runner is best for egg production, but is not equal to the others for meat.

Ducks should have a snug shelter for nights. A swimming pond or creek is not needed, but they need a trough for splashing and washing. They consume a lot of clean water.

Ducks usually lay their eggs early in the morning, and they often prefer to drop those eggs in any mud puddle about the barn lot, or as they swim in the creek. But if a house is provided they will lay in their nests if kept up until 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning. Nests can be made for the layers along one of the walls by nailing little boards about fifteen inches apart to this wall. These form a sort of stall, into which you place straw. Nail a low cleat along the nest fronts, close to the floor. This prevents the eggs rolling out and does not hinder the duck stepping into her laying stall.

Keep the Bull In Bounds.

The bullpen is a necessity on every farm. It is unwise and injudicious to allow the bull to run at liberty with the cattle.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Clean and whitewash your poultry house.

Dust the sitting hen with insect powder before giving her the eggs.

Buy a few sittings of eggs for hatching or some baby chicks if you wish to improve your stock.

Decide to increase egg production next season. Give this problem all the time you can spare for it.

Mate early layers with a good, vigorous male, allowing him from ten to fifteen pullets. Breed from young males rather than from two-year or three-year males.

LIVE STOCK ON THE FARM.

How a Grain Grower Turned a Loss Into Substantial Profit.

A number of years ago a North Dakota wheat farmer, whose exclusive grain growing had put him deep in debt, desired from his bank a loan of $1,000, writes J. C. McDowell in the Kansas Farmer. Except the horses there was no live stock—not a cow, a pig or even a chicken—on the place. The banker, a very shrewd business man, was able to analyze the problem

GARDENING NOTES.

Plant at least a few onion sets in the open ground just as soon as the soil can be prepared. Early planting is favorable to early maturity and high yields.

It is possible to grow strong rhubarb roots for forcing purposes in one year. The two essentials are early planting under glass and very rich soil when they are planted out of doors.

Witloof or French endive is easily forced in the cellar near the furnace. Sow seed in the open ground to produce roots for forcing next winter.

Why not grow some strong asparagus roots this summer for your own use and a surplus to sell to your neighbors?

The early, smooth peas may be planted just as soon as the frost is out of the ground. See that some rotten manure is worked into the furrows.

BARRENNESS IN CORN.

Various Reasons Other Than Heredity Given For Loss of Yield.

Many of our corn breeders treat barrenness in corn as hereditary. However, I have noticed that if corn is planted properly, not too thick, on well prepared fertile soil and given good cultivation there are as a rule very few barren stalks, says a correspondent of the American Agriculturist.

On the other hand if the corn is planted too thick and the grass and weeds allowed to grow with the corn there are more barren stalks in the same variety than in such corn if well cared for.

If the barrenness has any hereditary tendency at all in corn it may be largely overcome by good soil preparation, careful planting and good cultivation. I would rather risk going to the corncrib to select my seed in the spring provided the corn was well dried before storing and was stored before hard freezing weather set in, than to trust to seed from a distance and thus get seed from a variety of corn not known and tested in my locality.

As to barrenness Professor Hunt in his "Cereals in America" says: "A varying percentage of the stalks of the field are barren, do not bear any ears. The percentage of barren stalks on a given soil varies with the thickness of planting and the season. Barrenness does not seem to be a variety characteristic. It seems to be largely the result of environment. If it were a hereditary characteristic the fact that the stalks are barren would tend to eliminate them."

A number of years ago a North Dakota wheat farmer, whose exclusive grain growing had put him deep in debt, desired from his bank a loan of $1,000, writes J. C. McDowell in the Kansas Farmer. Except the horses there was no live stock—not a cow, a pig or even a chicken—on the place. The banker, a very shrewd business man, was able to analyze the problem and to discover the cause of the farmer's financial difficulties, and he agreed to make the loan only on condition that the borrower change his system of farming.

The system outlined by the banker required that a portion of the loan should be used to purchase two cows, half a dozen pigs and a small flock of poultry. It also provided for a fair sized vegetable garden. Grain farming was to be continued as before. The banker figured that the live stock and the garden would, in poor as well as in good seasons, fully support the farmer's table. He figured that in poor years the farmer would be able to play even and that in the good, and even in the average year, the farm would produce enough to gradually wipe out the debt.

The farmer reluctantly agreed to the banker's terms, received the loan and met the conditions. In five years he was out of debt and rated as a substantial and prosperous farmer and business man. To him farming had ceased to be a game of chance and had become a business.

TO IMPROVE THE FRUIT.

Thinning Advised For Those Who Want Product of High Quality.

To many it is a waste of time and labor to thin fruit trees, but with few exceptions it should be done. When the tree bears a light crop little thinning is necessary, but since most trees bear too much it is necessary to thin them to obtain fruit of proper quantity and quality. The purpose of thinning is to secure large, healthy, well flavored fruit in culling out the knotty, diseased, ill flavored ones. In order to prevent waste, feed the culls to hogs and poultry.

Culling out can be gauged by no fast rule. It is seldom overdone since the fruit grows fast up to harvest time. It is best to pull each wormy and blighted fruit. Such fruit will either drop from the tree before picking or prove worthless for storage or marketing.

Thinning will also prevent good fruit from contamination. In addition, the remaining fruit has a greater chance of development because the tree is not called upon to nourish those infested. The fruit produced from trees that have been thinned is of far superior quality.—American Agriculturist.

Man and the Ground.

The love of dirt is among the earliest of passions, as it is the latest. Mud pies gratify one of our first and best instincts. * * * Fondness for the ground comes back to a man after he has run the round of pleasure and business, eaten dirt and sown wild oats, drifted about the world and taken the wind in all its moods. The love of digging is sure to come back to him. * * * To own a bit of ground, to scratch it with a hoe, to plant seeds and watch their renewal of life—this is the commonest delight of the race, the most satisfactory thing a man can do.—Charles Dudley Warner.

locality.

As to barrenness Professor Hunt in his "Cereals in America" says: "A varying percentage of the stalks of the field are barren, do not bear any ears. The percentage of barren stalks on a given soil varies with the thickness of planting and the season. Barrenness does not seem to be a variety characteristic. It seems to be largely the result of environment. If it were a hereditary characteristic the fact that the stalks are barren would tend to eliminate them."

Would it not be a good plan to observe along the line of barrenness next summer when the corn is earing rather than to take it for granted that barrenness is an hereditary characteristic that can be overcome or controlled only by years of painstaking breeding?

Sanitary Hens' Nests.

The hens' nests shown herewith are easily kept clean and sanitary, writes a correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer. Foot wide boards are best to use in its construction, excepting the covering board, which should be fourteen inches wide, or two boards that total fourteen inches.

The board b, that forms the bottom of the nest, is made so it can slide out and in, drawer fashion. It is supported by two cleats, c c, one each nailed to the lower ends of the upright end boards. These end boards are made two and one-half inches longer than the partitions. Thus the lower ends of the partitions are just above the bottom board. When the bottom board is drawn out the nests are bottomless, making them free from louse harboring dust. The upright end boards and partitions are sawed off angling, so the covering board when nailed on will have sufficient slope to let a hen that attempts to roost on top slide off.

A board about five inches wide is nailed on in front to keep the nest material in the nests. In front a 1 by 2 inch lath is fastened on, perch-like, so as to be about five inches from the nests and two inches above the level of the sliding bottom. The use of the lath is that a hen may walk on it until she comes to a vacant nest.

Contagious Ophthalmia.

The disease is due to a specific germ, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer. Isolate the affected animals in a darkened stable and feed them light, laxative rations. Twice daily bathe the eyes with a 10 per cent solution of boric acid applied each time with a fresh swab of absorbent cotton. Every other day dust the eyeballs with a mixture of finely powdered calomel and boric acid. Substitute iodoform for calomel in the worst cases. After inflammation subsides wet the eyeball once daily with a solution of two grains of nitrate of silver in an ounce of distilled water, to be kept in a blue glass bottle to prevent chemical changes. The latter treatment is for opacity of the eyeball. Keep the cradle off low, wet pastures. Clean up, disinfect and whitewash the stables, fences and feeding racks and troughs.

New Haven, Conn.

Gentlemen:-

I am enclosing report of test of your Maxwell automobile recently made in our laboratory.

I should like to add the following comments:

1. RELIABILITY OF TEST.

A preliminary test was made on April 19th, using a new car which was rather stiff. The showing was so good that we decided to make a second test. This was made on April 30th, using same car. On this test, the car showed less stiffness and the performance was better than on the first car. The second test was supervised by our most careful experts, and the results, I believe to be perfectly reliable.

2. MILEAGE.

The efficiency of the Maxwell automobile as indicated by the number of miles on a level road, is exceptionally high. This mileage record is better than that of any one of forty automobiles tested in our laboratory to date.

3. MOTOR PERFORMANCE.

The efficiency of the motor and carburetor as indicated by the pounds of gasoline used per hour per horse-power at rear tires, is exceedingly good, and indicates very perfect carburetor action over the whole range of speed and load. This record like that on mileage per gallon, is the best one that we have had.

Very truly yours,

E. H. Lockwood

German Losses are 2,000,000

LONDON, May 19.—The Chronicle says: "We have received what purports to be an authoritative statement of the casualties in the German ranks from the beginning of the war till March 23rd. The number of lists of dead, wounded and missing until that date was 180. Between March 23rd and May 15th forty-five further lists have been published, making a total of 224. Statements in our possession containing the grand total of casualties of the first 180 lists cover the period of fighting from Aug. 2 till Feb. 14. The remaining 45 lists deal with the period between the middle of February and the end of March. According to the general statement from which we quote, the following is the classified loss until Feb. 14: Dead—Officers, 10,951; noncoms and men, 237,697.

Wounded—Officers, 19,630 noncoms and men, 728,406.
Missing—Officers, 1853; noncoms and men, 177,144.
Total, 1,175,681.
"We have not any classified statement with regard to the next 45 lists but on a basis of 180 earlier lists they would probably add an additional 300,000 to the total. It is to be borne in mind that the six weeks covered by the latest 45 lists include the exceptionally severe fighting in Poland, Galicia and the Carpathians, as well as tremendous and sustained struggles in Flanders and northwest France. The probability, therefore, is that the grand total of German casualties till March 31 cannot be far short of 1,800,000. Another quarter million must certainly be added for the fighting of the last six weeks."

Mr. David Andrews had the misfortune to meet with an accident on Thursday morning while working in Light's factory. He was operating a jointer and caught his left hand, losing the first two fingers.

A branch of a tree on Centre Street rubbing on the main wires of the Seymour Power Co., plunged the town into darkness on Sunday evening, just as the Church Services were commencing. Repairs were speedily made and a partial service given for the rest of the night.

Can you think of a more pleasant day's outing than the Canadian Order of Forester's excursion to Picton's Victoria Day celebration will afford. It's the day of all days to have a good time on: it's a day that make for good health and pleasure; it's a day you cannot afford to miss. So make up your mind to cast dull care away, and take in this delightful tripper steamer Brockville, to Picton on Monday next, May 24th.

Mr. W. B. Johnston this week received a letter from his son, Robt. Johnston in which he states that he came through a terrible battle, in which the Canadians lost such a lot of men. He was in the trenches ten days and got a taste of the German gas. Pte. Johnston says it is a perfect hell on earth to see Germans, Canadians and British lying in thousands, dead on the field. He writes that he is all, but a little shaky after the battle.

Are Foxes Vegetarians?

Foxes are not generally accredited with vegetarian instincts. You never see their tracks, as you see those of rabbits, around a young oak tree shoot which has been nibbled down to the tough stem. But Aesop evidently thought otherwise when he wrote his fable of the sour grapes, and there is plenty of testimony that Aesop was right. Foxes do eat wild grapes, as many observers have testified, climbing a considerable way to get them, and probably at times they eat berries and perhaps apples. I have found their tracks, at any rate, beneath apple trees. I have also been confidently assured that they eat the persimmons in Virginia, that the "ol' houn' dawgs" know how good this fruit is, too, and if you wish to find the very best bee tree take a "dawg" with you.—Walter Prichard Eaton in Harper's Magazine.

Character Shown by the Nose.

"Here is an article in the paper that says a woman's character can be determined by her nose."

"Well, there may be something in that, but there's a surer way. No one can make a mistake concerning a woman's character if he will look at the noses of other women who meet her. The extent to which they turn up at such times shows just what she is or isn't."—Exchange.

Farmers Ahead With Work.

Farmers are away ahead with their work. If there is one man more than another who is entitled to a holiday it is the hard-working farmer after the heavy spring's work. And what better way could he spend it than by taking in the Canadian Order of Foresters' excursion per Str. Brockville, to Picton on Victoria Day, Monday, May 24th, and enjoy the splendid programme Prince Edward Agricultural Society is putting on for that day?

Warning.

Fruit growers are warned not to spray their fruit trees while in bloom. This practice is against the law, and the Lennox and Addington branch of the Ontario Beekeepers Association will prosecute all cases where members bees are killed by orchardists, spraying trees in bloom. Apart from the fact that it is against the law spraying trees while in bloom does little good. The trees should be sprayed before they blossom out, and again just before the blossoms have fallen, and these two sprayings will protect against both the tent caterpillars and the codling moth. Bees help fertilize the blossoms, and are a friend of the orchardist. It is hoped that the orchardists will co-operate with the beekeepers, so that infractions of the law will not result.

GRATITUDE, VIGOR, BUSINESS.

All over Russia, women are heartily thanking services in church of gratitude for the increased happiness and prosperity which come so them through this great social reform that Russia has known.

In view of the high mortality of so-called "alcoholic diehards," Government were obliged to fortify many places, the sale of wood alcohol, Hoffmann's drops and especially ture polish. The mortality from products is thirty-three per cent., pared with five per cent. from ordinary alcohol. Rich "diehards" have the most fantastic prices for vodka and other spirits as might be concealed in some places.

During the last few months German military aviators have constantly dropped proclamations among Russian soldiers at the front, promising the best possible treatment and a vodka they liked on condition they surrendered. The only was that every Russian soldier filled with the utmost disgust for the despicable and degenerate method the German army, and fought still greater valor than heretofore conscious of the fact that he was fighting for the highest ideals of humanity.—W.C.T.U. items.

CANADIAN JUBILEE SINGERS COMING.

The Original Canadian Jubilee Singers will give an entertainment in the Napanee Town Hall on Friday evening, June 4th. This famous concert company is being brought to Napanee under the auspices of Argyle Lodge, No. 212, I.O.O.F.

This is a concert company of the Highest Order, not an aggregation of "Ragtime Artists" or "Cake Walkers." They will present plantation melodies and ballads, sacred and secular duets, trios, quartettes and choruses.

The Canadian Jubilee Singers have been giving their concerts for the last thirty-five years, and have appeared in practically every town and city on the American and European continents.

From Collingwood, Ont., we get the following report:

An enjoyable concert was given in the Methodist church last Saturday evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society, when the Canadian Jubilee Singers provided a program of sweet and quaint numbers, greatly pleasing an audience of about three hundred persons, despite the fact of its being Saturday evening. The various numbers were well received and the company were exceedingly generous with encores, which the continued hearty applause at times brought forth. The Canadian Jubilee Singers are justly entitled to a crowded house should they come over this line in the future.—Collingwood, Ont., Enterprise.
